

Birthday gala held for Ingram

Earline Ingram of Winston-Salem was treated to an extra special birthday celebration when a birthday bash was thrown in her honor at the Holiday Inn North last weekend.

Mrs. Ingram's nieces, Joyce Burton and Sarah Hines of Washington, sponsored the 76th birthday celebration.

More than 50 people attended the event.

Anna Ingram, pianist, was the mistress of ceremonies. She also played the "Happy Birthday" song for the occasion. She was the accompanist for Minnie King and Lillie B. Davis, who each sang solos dedicated to the guest of honor. Angela Hood also presented a solo.

Testimonies were made by several of Mrs. Ingram's friends, including Dr. W.C. Hay, the Rev. E.L. Clark, the Rev. John Jackson, Deacon Henry Thomas, Deacon Fred Chavis, Macie Siebert and Dr. Mabel Sullivan-Jessup.

Family members presenting testimonials were Gertrude Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Millerton and family, and Joyce Burton.

During the program, Mrs. Ingram thanked each guest for coming to help her celebrate and for the gifts which she received. She also took time out to pose for a picture with several of her oldest friends, Nonnie Stewart, Theresa Hanes and Dr. Jessup.

Dolls to make unusual appearance at center

Winston-Salem Delta Fine Arts Inc. will exhibit dolls from the collections of three Winston-Salem collections Aug. 21 to Sept. 30.

The exhibit will include handmade, restored and international dolls.

The unusual exhibit will include 70 dolls, each unique and a work of art as well as antique and restored doll fixtures.

A reception opening the exhibit will be held at the Delta Arts Center, 1511 E. Third St., at 4 p.m. Aug. 21.

Doll-collecting is listed as the number four collectable in the world. The growing enthusiasm for doll-collecting has reached every section of America, and is becoming a favorite American pastime.

The exhibit will introduce many to the world of doll-collecting and will allow others the chance to indulge their childhood fantasies such as playing with dolls and holding their imaginary tea parties on summer days.

Many of the dolls in the exhibit were handcast by their owners and all are dressed in handmade garments coordinated especially for each doll's personality. Several of the handmade dolls have won prizes and recognition in area doll shows.

The restored dolls include a Chatty Kathy doll, a Thumbelina doll, a Shirley Temple doll, and more. Effanbee, Valentine and Madame Alexander dolls will also be shown.

The international dolls include dolls dressed in their countries' traditional garbs, as well as dolls collected from around the world.

Among the exhibitors will be Permilla F. Dunston, a longtime collector of dolls. She has made many dolls and her collection has received prizes and awards. Dr. Dunston has an extensive collection and a vast knowledge of the art of collecting dolls as well as the history of the doll in America and abroad.

Also exhibiting will be Eva Jeffries, who has been collecting for about seven years and has amassed an impressive doll collection. She, like Dr. Dunston, has hand cast and dressed many of her dolls.

For more information call the Delta Arts Center.

Celebration!
