

WFU professor named committee head

"Economic civil rights" is one of the new issues Broyles says he wants to put on the table. He says that his own ideas are not really defined, but that he believes there are laws which are economically restrictive that need to be re-evaluated. Zoning laws, he says, may be considered constraints to economic growth in certain situations, and minimum wage laws keep some people out of the labor force.

Broyles also has some unique ideas about our educational systems. "A lot of public education is a waste of time. Maybe we should think about dropping attendance requirements where education is not serving a purpose," he said. Higher education is a civil right, according to Broyles, and students "who are qualified need to have well-financed opportunities."

Another item for Broyles' civil rights agenda is family disintegration. He says that he believes income tax deductions for dependents should be lowered, and that the federal government has a responsibility to provide day care for children of working mothers. "There are a myriad of laws that are insensitive to working mothers," he said. "There is an environment in which naturalness and fulfilling happiness of family are overlooked."

The U. S. Commission on Civil Rights is an independent, bipartisan, fact-finding agency of the executive branch first established under the Civil Rights Act of 1957. Its membership comprises eight commissioners, four of whom are appointed by the president and four by the Congress.

The members of the commission's state advisory committees serve without compensation and assist the commission with its fact-finding, investigative, and information dissemination functions. Individual members of these committees are nominated by the commissioners or the regional director of their area and voted upon at a regular meeting of the commissioners.

The N. C. Advisory Committee has been inactive for a year, according to Broyles, who said he hopes to revitalize the committee at a meeting tentatively scheduled for Oct. 27.

Broyles was a Reynolds Research Fellow at Wake Forest University from 1983 to 1984, and is the author of several publications on constitutionalism and American government. He was North Carolina Chairman of Scholars for Reagan/Bush in 1984.

He shares his membership on the state committee with a colleague, Dr. George M. Bryan, professor of education at Wake Forest University. Other committee members are: Dr. Joseph E. DiBona, associate professor of education at Duke University; Mrs. Betty C. Hooks, supervisor of Needs Assessment in the Department of Housekeeping and Volunteer Services of the Broughton State Hospital in Morganton; Ms. June McLaurin Jeffers, owner and manager of the McLaurin Funeral Home in Reidsville; Mr. John Poag, president of Capt. Bill's Inc., a large seafood restaurant in Morehead City; Ludie Dianne Graham, associate attorney general in Raleigh; Dr. Richard D. Robbins, chairman of the Department of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology at the N. C. A&T University; Mr. Asa T. Spaulding, broadcasting professional and former vice president of Durham Life Broadcasting, Inc.; Mr. William Stern, president of the Residence Development Company in Greensboro; and Dr. Tommie M. Young, professor of education at N. C. A&T University.

Man dies in drug-related shootout assault with a deadly weapon with the intent to kill, shooting into an occupied vehicle, conspiracy to sell and deliver cocaine, possession of cocaine with the intent of selling it, and trafficking in more than an ounce of cocaine.

Donnell T. Danner was also charged with manufacturing illegal drugs and maintaining a car and motel room for the purpose of selling and delivering drugs.

The charges against the two had not been changed late Tuesday to reflect Lewis' death, but Moreau said they would probably both be charged with murder. The Danners are both in jail under $250,000 bond each, he said.

Curtis Sylvester McLendon of 35 N. Woods Circle was driving the car with Lewis in the passenger seat and was slightly wounded in the incident, Moreau said. McLendon refused medical treatment, however.

Moreau said police know which of the Danner brothers fired the shots, but both will be charged with murder. He also said Lewis and the Danners were acquainted.

A uniformed police officer on patrol late Sunday morning spotted the Danner's car parked at a local motel, Moreau said. After the residents of the surrounding rooms were evacuated, one of the Danner brothers saw a patrol car through the motel window and came outside. He told police he was alone in the room.

But a policeman saw some movement through the room's window and knew at least one more person was inside, Moreau said. The brother then yelled for his brother to come out, and he did. When police asked to search the room, the Danners gave them permission and admitted that more people were there.

Police found more than an ounce of cocaine in the motel room, and some was packaged for street sale, Moreau said.

A 17-year-old youth from Brooklyn, N.Y. was also apprehended in the motel room, Moreau said. The others who were arrested protected the youth during police interviews, saying he was not involved, Moreau said.

Because the youth originally gave police an erroneous name and age, he was charged with supplying a police officer with false information. He otherwise would not have been charged with anything and would probably now "be on a bus home," Moreau said.

Those found in the motel room after the Danners came out include Tony Harris, 20, of 209C Rose Hill Gardens, Brooklyn, N.Y. Harris was charged with trafficking cocaine, manufacturing cocaine, conspiracy to sell and deliver cocaine, and possession of cocaine with intent to sell it. His bond was set at $175,000.

The two from the Fayetteville area were Waymond Gainey, 20, of Hope Mills, charged with cocaine trafficking, cocaine possession and conspiracy to sell cocaine, and Timothy Adams, 21, of 1708 Shore Rd., charged with manufacturing cocaine, cocaine trafficking, cocaine possession and conspiracy to sell cocaine. Gainey's bond was set at $75,000, and Adams' bond was $150,000.

Police found several types of weapons in the cars involved, Moreau said, and one in the motel room also. One of the weapons had been reported stolen from someone in Fayetteville, Moreau said.

Police think they will have little trouble convicting those arrested,

Moreau said. "We have a lot of information about this case," Moreau said. "There were a lot of witnesses who saw it."

City vice detectives and Fayetteville police are investigating the possibility of a Brooklyn, N.Y. drug connection with the local area, Moreau said.

THIS BOTTLE OF BEER COST $50 MILLION.

Why have we spent $50 million to develop Miller Genuine Draft? Because we've always believed in making every effort to produce the best tasting bottle of beer. So we took a long, hard look at how a beer is made. Most beers are heat-pasteurized. And that can affect a beer's taste. But Miller Genuine Draft isn't heat-pasteurized. It's cold-filtered. We spent a lot of time and effort to develop the cold-filtered process. It's an exclusive method that doesn't alter the rich, smooth, pure taste of beer. Cold-filtered Miller Genuine Draft. What our $50 million buys you is a beer that's as real as it gets.
