HELP OR HANDICAP?

Bryant Bond, 4, gives his cousin, Cavon Walker, 3, a little boost after Cavon attempted to exit his trike with a forward somersault that he couldn't quite finish. Cavon had been astride the overturned trike performing "maintenance-with-a-stick" as the two conducted an impromptu auto shop in their grandmother's front yard in Mansfield, Ohio.

AKA chapter begins Fashionetta events

To kick off Fashionetta '88, Phi Omega Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority Inc. sponsored a splash party for the Fashionetta contestants.

The event was held Saturday, Aug. 27, at the home of Marian Brown. The contestants in attendance were Carmen Barber, Kenya Bass, Charlita Cardwell, Lillian Carter, Knashawn Hodge, Karmisha Holman, Krystal Mock, Inge Rousseau, Cassandra Sledge, Rhonda Wall, Natitia Wilson and Lynette Worley.

The Fashionetta is a bi-annual fund-raising project which awards scholarships.

The contest provides deserving young ladies the opportunity to express their various talents. The program will be held Sunday, Nov. 13, at 5 p.m. at Kenneth R. William Auditorium.

Annette Wilson is basileus of the chapter.

Jones delivers message role in stopping its spread. He denies that his belief is pessimistic, calling it rather, "absolute realism." Afro-Americans who are choosing to attend white churches, he said, are forgetting that those same churches have been instruments in perpetuating racism throughout history.

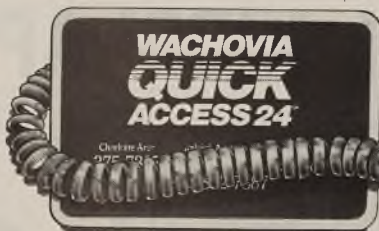

"The vast majority of black churches have a firm understanding of the racist ethos and they know that racism could not have existed for so long without churches letting it be that way. We couldn't have had his much racism without the cooperation of churches on both sides of the Atlantic."

Jones is more optimistic about the survival and maintenance of the black church. He is confident that the black church will continue to be the foundation and the cornerstone of the Afro-American community as a whole.

"The black church, because of its affinity and closeness to the total life experience of black people, will remain the cornerstone of black people," he said. "It's the oldest of all black institutions, the only place where the idea of bettering life for blacks is lifted up and it's the connecting rod between our history and our hope for the future."

Revival services will be held nightly at United Metropolitan beginning at 7:30. The Rev. D. Ballard is the church's pastor.
