W-S Urban League to hold Health Fair

The Winston-Salem Urban League will sponsor its annual Health Fair Nov. 17 from 9 a.m. until noon at their facility located 201 West Fifth Street.

Acting President Hazel Brown states that the theme of this year's fair is "Fitness for Life: Education/Exercise/Examination." Brown stated further that the Urban League remains firmly committed to improving the quality of life of the "total" individual. "The purpose of this event has always been to promote and encourage good health habits and preventive health maintenance. Older adults and particularly minorities clearly remain at risk when it comes to certain health disorders.

According to Cleo Solomon, Health Fair Coordinator, local health professionals will provide free screening in areas as cholesterol; vision; dental; and blood pressure. Solomon also stated that local health care agencies are working cooperatively with staff to provide participants with a wide range of information based on current interest. Bowman Gray School of Medicine; The American Cancer Society; Alzheimer's Support Network; American Heart Association; and Mental Health Association are among those that will be present. Special workshops and demonstrations will be ongoing throughout the morning.

No admission will be charged. The public is invited. For further information, contact the Urban League office at 725-5614.

'R-Day' Clean-up efforts benefit children's hospital

The Winston-Salem Clean Community Committee Inc. has announced the results of "R-Day" held Oct. 15.

More than 27 tons of recyclable materials were donated by the citizens at two collection sites.

The committee collected 14,245 pounds of glass, 31,940 pounds of newspaper, 7,880 pounds of magazines and 430 pounds of aluminum cans to be recycled.

Brenner's Children's Hospital received the benefits from the sale of the donated materials in the amount of nearly $1,200.

In 1962, a seventeen year-old discovered the world.

Back when Patricia Lightfoot got interested in space flight, cars had fins, movies had double features and mathematically gifted Black girls had limited career prospects. But 1962 was the year Patricia Lightfoot won a scholarship to Howard University. And on the way to becoming a math teacher, she discovered a world of opportunities.

In the unique environment that historically Black colleges provide, Patricia Lightfoot learned that her dreams of becoming a mathematician were achievable. "At Howard," she says, "I learned how to learn. A Black college gave me confidence... and a support that was always there when I needed it."

That confidence helped Patricia master higher mathematics, computer science, graduate school and her own destiny. Today, as head of the spacecraft Control Branch of NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center, she directs the design and development of ground support systems for vital satellite projects.

When you're considering colleges, doesn't it make sense to consider the ones that produce distinguished achievers like Patricia Lightfoot and 40% of the nation's Black college graduates? America's Black colleges. If you want to make a world of difference in your future, they can show you how.

This food for thought is brought to you by Maxwell House® Coffee, a supporter of America's historically Black colleges.
