Afro-American Historical Society selects officers, board members

The Society for the Study of Afro-American History has elected officers and board members for the new year.

The following officers and board members were elected: Dr. William Rice, president; Louise Hamilton, treasurer; Herman L. Aldridge, secretary; Dr. Don Schoonmaker, first vice president; and Dr. James McLofton, second vice president.

The board of directors will include: Dorothy Blount, Schoonmaker, Harold Brown, Joan Cardwell, and Hamilton; one-year terms; Dr. Cleon Thompson, Bill East, Harold L. Kennedy Jr., James R. Diggs and Vivian Weaver, two-year terms; Dr. Donald McThompson, Rice, Cheryl Super, Dr. James McLofton, Dr. Linwood Davis and Mazie Woodruff, three-year terms.

The officers and board members will be sworn in during a special ceremony Sunday, Feb. 12, in the Society's new office in the old nursing building at Winston-Salem State University.

The purpose of the meeting is to introduce the community to the office and to kick off the 1989 membership drive and to promote the sale of the society's historical calendar.

The calendar is dedicated to the memory of the late Joe Bradshaw, a local historian.

Board says no to task force request

Salem Chamber of Commerce will donate $5,000 and staff assistance for the study. Pitt also has expressed optimism about the outstanding $15,000 grant request to Z. Smith/Mary Reynolds Foundation.

"For them not to allow the $23,000 to go towards implementation is a little ludicrous because we want to see the study through and the projects become reality," Pitt said. "It doesn't make sense to have a study for the sake of having a study."

Henry, who is heading the study group and is the task force's project consultant, said he may be in Winston-Salem Jan. 30 and 31 to survey some land in East Winston.

"The city is now in the process of doing some inventory of vacant parcels with the East Winston area that they will be providing to the consultants and we expect that to be here this week," Henry said during a telephone interview from his office in Maryland. "We will be in the process of evaluating that data and the consultants will be planning a trip to Winston-Salem Monday and Tuesday to survey those sites."

Thomas H. Schram, an economic development coordinator for the city, said Monday that the data Henry requested was ready and would be sent off as soon as possible.

Henry said he will give the task force a progress report on the study during the group's Feb. 8 meeting.

president of the Minister's Conference. "A cursory glance at the candidates reveals Dr. Barbara K. Phillips as an outstanding candidate. She has 30 years of experience in this system, and an earned doctorate with a dissertation focusing on our educational structure.

"We believe all of the criteria cited earlier marks her as an exceptional candidate. At this point in the process, as your committee searches for a superior candidate with credentials within or outside our county, we invite your careful consideration of Dr. Barbara K. Phillips."

Copies of the letter, dated Jan. 20, 1989, were sent to each board member, the National Education Association and the State Board of Education.

After the public meeting, the board recessed and reconvened in executive session.

Board members are scheduled to contact references of the 11 semi-finalists this week, and will meet Jan. 30 to review that data, said Sae Carson, director of community-schools relations. The board is scheduled to name three to five finalists Feb. 6, and a series of public meetings will follow that announcement to give the public an opportunity to meet each finalist. The board is to choose a superintendent shortly after that.

guidelines; guarantee to hear public response to selection.

In addition, the mental health board has received recommendations in letters from James B. Yarbrough Jr., the city's deputy planning director, and Kevin FitzGerald, special projects coordinator for Forsyth County.

"Your proposed policy greatly improves the quantity of public notification and involvement,"

Yarbrough said in the letter dated Jan. 4. "I am concerned, however, about the perceived quality of the ensuing public interaction. That perception coupled with a general fear of group homes may severely hamper your ability to finalize potential sites."

He suggested the board use targeted news releases, newspaper articles, television news programs and speakers bureaus as mediums to increase public awareness and understanding of the need for group homes.

In addition, he suggested developing general guidelines for determining qualified sites and that the board consider lengthening the review time between community notification and final site selection.

FitzGerald's letter of recommendations were those the commissioners suggested to the committee.

The committee preparing the policy on group home site selection and public notification asked the full area board for more time to examine the suggestions and to draw up another draft of the policy.

"The committee will get together during the next two to three weeks and hopefully we'll be able to bring a policy statement in draft form next month," Irvin said.

Black History Month events at UNCG include touring play and Duke Ellington Orchestra

GREENSBORO -- A concert by the Duke Ellington Orchestra and a performance of a play about black women will be among highlights of the Black History Month observance during February at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Opening events on Saturday, Feb. 4, will be a performance of Ntozake Shange's play "For Coloured Girls Who Have Considered Suicide/When the Rainbow Is Enuf." The play uses music, dance, poetry and prose to depict the existence of black women in America by focusing on the lives of seven characters.

On Friday, Feb. 10, the 16-member Duke Ellington Orchestra will present a concert of Ellington favorites. Since Ellington's death in 1974, his son Mercer Ellington has led the orchestra and retained the jazz composer's arrangements. Songs to be performed will include "Take the A Train," "Satin Doll," "Mood Indigo" and "Don't Get Around Much Anymore."

Both performances will begin at 8:15 p.m. in Aycock Auditorium. Tickets for the play are $7 each, and Ellington tickets cost $10. For more information call the Aycock box office at 334-5546 weekdays from 1 to 5:30 p.m. Other events include:

- Feb. 5, Neo-Black Society Anniversary Choir performance, 3 p.m., Aycock Auditorium, UNCG campus. Free.

- Feb. 13 to 17, showing of "Eyes on the Prize," Public Broadcasting Service series on civil rights, noon and 3 p.m., Sharpe and McIver Lounges, Elliott University Center, UNCG campus. Free.

- Feb. 15, lecture on retention of high-risk students and motivation for success by Dr. Eula Aiken of Atlanta, project director of continuing nursing education and computer technology with the Southern Regional Education Board, 3 p.m., Room 130, UNCG School of Nursing. Free.

- Feb. 17 to 19, movie "Cry Freedom," 8 p.m., Kirkland Lounge, Elliott University Center, UNCG campus. Free.

- Feb. 24, Neo-Black Society Gala Celebration, "Look Where We Came From, Look Where We're Going," 8 p.m., Cone Ballroom, Elliott University Center, UNCG campus. Free.
