

Old Hickory Council seeks nominations for Whitney Young Award

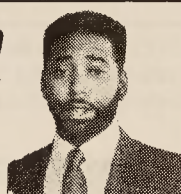

The Old Hickory Council is seeking nominations for the Whitney Young Jr. Service Award. The purpose of the award is to recognize outstanding services by individual and/or organizations. Demonstrated involvement in the dream of justice and equality for all, in the development and implementation of scouting programs for low income youth are the focus. Nominations may be submitted by a registered adult member of the Old Hickory Council. The award will be presented at the annual council banquet on Feb. 27. For nomination forms call 723-5506.

The Year of the Eagle
During 1990, there will be a celebration of Eagle Scouting in every troop, district and council in America.
Through a national and local media campaign, scouting will build on the already high esteem held by the general public for Eagle scouting, and demonstrate that it is the quest for scouting's flagship rank that produces legends.

The objective of the Year of the Eagle is to involve an additional 100,000 adult Eagle Scouts in active volunteer scouting positions.

The Year of the Eagle, with its search for "lost Eagles," provides a superb resource of highly motivated, qualified adults for involvement in the scouting.

The names and addresses of "lost Eagles" should be reported to the council service center. Look for more information in the coming months.

Scouts plan Ski Trip
Scouts of East Winston-Salem under the leadership of Paul [Name] have been invited to participate in ski nights in the Appalachian region. The French Swiss Ski Club has developed special ski nights designed to bring an excellent opportunity to youth at discount prices.
The program includes a ski lift rental and a one-night stay for only $17 per scout. Parents are also invited as chaperones. Leaders receive one complimentary lift ticket for each of 20 skiers, however, a minimum number is required for these special rates.
East Winston Scouts plan to take advantage of this opportunity on Saturday, Feb. 24. The scout package is from 6 to 10 p.m. Call the council office for more information.

Carolinians' choirs get together for Gospelfest

McDonald's is inviting gospel choirs throughout the Carolinas to the Carolina Gospelfest '90, a celebration of inspirational music. Winning choirs will compete for prizes.

Sponsored by local McDonald's restaurants, the event will feature choirs competing with other choirs of comparable size in one of four categories: choirs of four to 19 members, 20 or more members or professional singing groups.

Not presently have a record, but are eligible to compete.

Preliminary events will be held at several sites throughout the Carolinas on several Saturdays in January. Winners of each preliminary event will advance to a semi-final and the semi-final winners will then compete in the final event on Sunday, April 8, in the Civic Center.

Highlights from the final event will be televised across the state.

Prizes in each category will be awarded for a grand prize of $1,000. All proceeds from the event will be donated to this cause, the United Negro College Fund.

gospel music has long been an important source of inspiration and is recognized as an integral part of the American music tradition. The singing competition, Carolina Gospelfest '90 will bring thousands of performers from various backgrounds to both celebrate and compete.

Registration blanks are available at all participating McDonald's. All registrations must be received by Feb. 16. For more information, call (919) 485-1111.

PTA plans reception for Brown

Moore Alternative School will host a reception in honor of Mrs. Brown on Sunday, Feb. 4, at the school.

Mrs. Brown was the principal of Moore School for 18 years before her current position as principal of a minority achievement school in Winston-Salem/Forsyth County.

In 1966, Mrs. Brown was promoted to principal of Mebane Elementary School. After five years, she was offered the principalship of Moore, the city-county's first alternative school. She is the school's first principal.

Parents, friends and neighbors are invited to attend. For more information, call by Jan. 31, 723-4943 or 722-4790.
