

Cooperative Education Week

The week of Oct. 1-5, was proclaimed by Gov. James Martin as "Cooperative Education Week" in North Carolina. In honor of that proclamation, former students, present students, and staff members at Winston-Salem State University got together to show off the school's program.

From left on the front row: (Staff) Lethia Speas, Angela Chasten, Sondra Williams, Sandra Gaskins; (Students) Tanya Blackweil, Sheilah Faucette, Nebra Bryant, Tamala Bullard, Robert Ellis (Alumni).

From left on the second row: (Alumni) Rodney Lisenby; (Students) Patricia Wiggins, Cynthia Miller, Helena Thomas.

From left on the third row: (Students) George Martin, Gennette Thompson, Keith Reaves.

From left on fourth row: (Alumni) Donald Dunn, Gregory Hairston; (Student) Joe Washington.

The program integrates classroom studies and practical work experience in industrial and business situations. The program also permits employers to select and train employees early in their educational careers of those employees.

Household Hazardous Waste Disposal Day

The City/County Utilities Commission will sponsor its second city-wide Household Hazardous Waste Disposal Day on Saturday, Oct. 13, from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The commission is asking city and county residents to bring household hazardous waste to the central lab and maintenance facility, 2799 Griffith Rd.

Almost everyone uses chemical products in his home that can be hazardous if not used properly. These products become "household hazardous wastes" once they are no longer needed. They may get thrown in the daily trash, down the drain, or poured on the ground and eventually end up in the local landfill or wastewater treatment plants, in streams, or ground water, some of which are equipped to treat hazardous waste.

The second Household Hazardous Waste Disposal Day will provide an opportunity to recycle or environmentally dispose of unwanted products from under sinks or in garages. Recyclers and contractors will be at the site to separate, package, transport, recycle and dispose of these items in an EPA-approved manner.

A household hazardous waste is a discarded household material that is poisonous, ignitable, explosive, or corrosive. Products with these characteristics frequently are labeled as poison, skin and eye irritants, flammable, combustible, harmful if swallowed, and much more.

Examples of household wastes that can be hazardous or difficult to dispose of properly are: metal polish, oven cleaners, rug shampoos, bug sprays, rat bait, pesticides, gasoline, fuel oil, antifreeze, motor oil, brake fluid, car batteries, paints, glues, strippers, thinners, ammunition, solvents, mercury batteries and unmixed photographic materials.

Keep items separate and in their original containers wherever possible. If the label is unreadable or a material is in a different container, label the item.

Put these items in a cardboard box lined with newspaper. Then, transport these to the disposal day site, where you will be directed to one of four unloading areas. A contractor's representative will unload the materials from your car and may ask questions about the items in order to help classify the items as efficiently as possible.

Do not bring regular trash or recyclables. Dispose of trash in the usual manner. Recyclables, such as newspaper, aluminum and glass, can be brought to the Recycling Center at 1639 Silas Creek Parkway.

Do not bring radioactive materials, infectious or medical wastes.

People who make things happen.

"Educating our youth is the most important job we have."

Christopher F. Edley
President and Chief Executive Officer
United Negro College Fund

Providing the spark for the United Negro College Fund for the past 15 years, Chris Edley is an energetic, savvy and consummate leader. He's also the first to point out that the education of our youth is a job that can't be done alone.

That's why Anheuser-Busch is helping to share the task with UNCF, just as we support other educational and cultural programs, community projects, and the development of minority businesses.

At Anheuser-Busch we're committed to a better quality of life. For everyone.

ANHEUSER-BUSCH COMPANIES

©1988 Anheuser-Busch Companies, Inc.

WE GOTCHA COVERED

On the streets, in the courtroom, on the playing field, in the churches...

The Winston-Salem Chronicle covers all the news effecting the Afro-American community. If you are a conscientious citizen and you want to get involved with the hottest issues around,

READ THE CHRONICLE!!!

We cover local politics from the primaries to the polls. No community or religious event escapes the keen eye of our reporters. And our sports pages feature exciting, action photos and stories about your favorite local high school athletes, local college stars, and even Pop Warner Football.

At the Chronicle, we have a genuine concern and personal interest in the day to day happenings in our community, and we express a strong point of view from a different perspective.

That's why "We gotcha covered!"

Winston-Salem Chronicle We Gotcha Covered!!

for subscriptions call 722-8624

WINNER of the 1988 PULITZER PRIZE

DRIVING Miss Daisy

A Play By ALFRED UHRY

October 19-20, 26-27 8 p.m.
21, 28 3 p.m.
Arts Council Theatre
610 Coliseum Drive, Winston-Salem
Admission: $10 Adults $6 Student/Senior Citizens
Call 723-7907 for Ticket Reservations

The NCBRC is supported by the United Arts Fund Drive of the Arts Council, Inc.
The Theatre Arts Section of the North Carolina Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources, provides grant assistance to this theatre organization from funds appropriated by the North Carolina General Assembly and the National Endowment for the Arts in Washington, DC, a federal agency.
Additional support received from Expansion Arts of the National Endowment for the Arts in Washington, DC, a federal agency, and the Lance Foundation.