Bowman Gray 'Trek' nets $1,800

The Oct. 20 bicycle "Trek for Health," sponsored by students at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, netted about $1,800 in pledges for the Triad Health Project, according to Jacob A. Neufeld, the student chair.

Neufeld said 19 of the 23 participants completed the 100-kilometer round trip from the Reynolda Campus of Wake Forest University to Hanging Rock State Park.

Seven of the riders were from the University of Florida College of Medicine in Gainesville.

The Trek benefited the Triad Health Project, an AIDS service organization whose services include support groups, information and referral, education and outreach, a speakers-bureau, a food closet, cooked meals, and housing assistance so AIDS patients can remain at home.

All participants were required to raise at least $100 in pledges for the Triad Health Project. All participants received a T-shirt and a lunch from Michael's, a local restaurant. Neufeld said the students are planning another "Trek for Health" next year.

Halloween candy exams offered

Attention of pint-sized ghouls and goblins:

When you finish trick-or-treating this Halloween, bring your children and their candy to Forsyth Memorial Hospital for candy x-rays from 7 to 9 p.m. The service is free and is open to children 12 and under who are accompanied by an adult.

The hospital's radiologists will review the images, and each child will receive a copy of his or her x-ray. Children must be in line by 9 p.m. to participate. Participants should park in the front visitor parking lot, enter at the admitting/discharge/outpatient entrance and follow the signs to the emergency department x-ray room.

Forsyth Memorial, and affiliate of Carolina Medicorp Inc. (CMI), has provided this service to the community for the past five years.

"There have been few cases of tampering with Halloween candy in North Carolina," said David Knesel, director of corporate communications for CMI. "X-rays are one way to discover possible foreign objects, but there are many things that are not detectable by x-ray. Parents should monitor all edibles before consumption and make sure their children practice safe trick-or-treat habits.

"In addition, it is educational for children to see how our imaging equipment works," added Knesel. "so if they're ever in the hospital and need x-rays, they'll know there's nothing to fear."

The People Marvin Ward Will Help The Most Can't Even Vote For Him

In 1978, when Marvin Ward was first elected to the Senate, his campaign promises were to people not old enough to vote for him. Because after a career as a Forsyth County teacher and school superintendent, Marvin Ward's top priority was to make sure our children received a good education.

During his 12 years as our state senator, Marvin Ward's commitment for quality education is unmatched. In just the last six years he has:

- co-sponsored the plan to insure every student in North Carolina receives a solid basic education.
- co-sponsored the plan which allows our local schools to have more say-so in determining how our children are taught.
- co-sponsored the new teacher salary plan, so we can keep our good teachers and attract the best new ones to our schools.

In fact, the educators of Forsyth County know how effective Marvin Ward is. That's why they've endorsed him in every election.

And while our children can't vote for Marvin Ward, you and I realize how important his experience is to our State. That's one of the reasons we've re-elected him for the last 12 years.

In the next two years education will be the top priority in our State Legislature. So now, more than ever, we need the leadership and experience of Marvin Ward in planning for our children's education and the future of North Carolina.
