Reader seeks advice for dating

Here are excerpts from a recent letter that I received. My comments follow the letter.

Q: I find most of my relationships with men boring, frustrating and depressing. I have never had a sexual experience that I really enjoyed because I do not like my partners as people. I fear being locked into a situation that will leave me feeling unhappy for a long time. So, I usually refuse an offer for a date. I would appreciate it if you would tell me, what makes for a successful relationship. What should I look for in my dates and mate? F.B., Cincinnati.

A: Your problem is one that practically each of us confronts. We want a guarantee that a date or a relationship will be successful. We want the guarantee even before we go out on the date. Unfortunately, there is no guarantee. Each relationship has its own barriers and pitfalls. Because of the nature of human beings, you can be certain that there will be problems. Here are a few things that will help you at least minimize the chance of failure.

Never allow yourself to become the "property" of someone else. Always keep the "chase" alive. Men and women are attracted to mates who are not easy to get.

Expect problems. Decide now that when problems arise, you will try to solve them, instead of making matters worse by letting your ego get involved.

Make yourself happy in the relationship. Don't expect anyone else to do it for you.

Keep a relationship fresh and interesting. Don't become predictable and, therefore, boring. Be willing to do some of the things that the other person enjoys - even if you don't really enjoy it.

Try to be the "right person." Remember, if you make the other person feel relaxed, they will probably make you feel relaxed. Two relaxed people make for a happy relationship.

Be flexible and willing to modify your requirements. A relationship is a lot like politics. You give up something that you like in order to get something that you want.

Find a person who is at least close to what you want before you involve yourself in the relationship. Don't expect to change anyone once the relationship has begun. They won't change. Neither will you.

Observe the other person when they are under stress to see if they can handle stressful situations without blowing a fuse. Can you?

Be sure that survival of the relationship is more important to both of you than any particular personal benefits.

Respect the feelings of the other person. Be aware of how what you say can make them feel. If it will hurt them, find another diplomatic way to say it.

Keep Winston-Salem Beautiful now recruiting volunteers for fall activities

Volunteers are being recruited for fall KWSB activities. Again this year Winston-Salem will participate in BIG SWEEP '91, the largest national waterway litter cleanup, on September 21. Zone captains and volunteers are needed to remove debris from local lakes, rivers, and creeks because it is harmful to people and wildlife. Big Sweep volunteers also record their finds on data cards, which allows organizers to determine the type of trash being left. KWSB also asks persons to report by September 1 or as soon as possible waterways and exact locations where volunteers need to focus their efforts.

Volunteers are also needed to assist in aluminum can recycling at the Dixie Classic Fair, October 9; and on Hazardous Waste Day/Recycling Day, November 16.

Those interested in volunteering for any of these activities should contact KWSB by telephoning 727-8013. A message that includes a daytime phone number and name can be left at this number in the evenings and on weekends.

This spring Keep Winston-Salem Beautiful (KWSB) hosted the first Triad Glad Bag-a-Thon and Winston-Salem volunteers collected 13,500 pounds of litter and 13,955 pounds of recyclables to the Thruway Shopping Center and the Recycling Station. And, over 200,000 pounds of telephone books and cardboard are being recycled into organic roof shingles as a result of telephone book recycling.

United Way announces campaign goal

The United Way of Forsyth County has announced a goal of $11,891,844 for the 1991 General Campaign about to get underway.

A kickoff event is planned for September 11, at which the results of the early Pacesetter Campaign will be announced.

Pacesetter employee groups commit themselves to trying for an increase of 20% over their previous year's record.

Paul Wiles, United Way General 1991 Campaign Chairman, said that the General Campaign Goal figure is 7.1% increase over last year.

The goal is set by striking a balance between the budget requests of human service agencies, as reviewed by informed citizen-volunteer panels, and consideration of current employee and corporate giving potential.

"We have every reason to believe that the community will meet the challenge of this goal successfully and, as always, with real pride," Wiles said.
