afterloss

Questions & Answers on recovering from grief *

Questions asked during bereavement counseling are answered by the editor of Afterloss, the grief-recovery letter.

Q. Recently widowed, I'm noticing some of my women friends act "funny" when I'm around them and their husbands. How could I be a threat? This really hurts my feelings.

A. There are women who feel adding a single person to their couples crowd presents a threat. Sometimes it is because they are insecure in their own marriages, but often it's because they see you as a widow now and worry about how they will survive a loss like yours. As much as they care for you, you represent something they'd rather not think about.
