

What's in vogue in women's fall fashions

For Fall '92 women's fashions are in the menswear mode. Everything from hats to cravats, from pantsuits to pinstripes is borrowed from the boys.

Tailored suits with longer jackets paired to relaxed, medium width trousers or long, skinny skirts are everywhere in every possible fabric. Even eveningwear is getting in on the act.

Think tuxedos or gray chiffon evening pants pinstriped in sequins. Cuff links, fob chains, stick pins, ties and ascots complete the look. Even the color palette has a menswear bent. Black, brown and virtually any shade of gray are enormously popular.

Vests abound as part of the menswear look or off on their own fashion venture. Lengths vary, from the traditional waistcoat length to dress length.

but it's equally beautiful on its own as an oversized tunic, or with bra-seaming and waistline draping, or with deep French cuffs and gathering yokes. are relaxing their strict suit-and-tie every-day policies to endorse Sportshirt Fridays. The result is an interesting collection of shirts, mainly in cotton and rayon, in beautiful patternings.

Plaids rate high on the list, with classic tartans appearing in traditional reds and blues or recolored in oranges and greens. Check, madras ombres follow in close order. Patterns are mixed according to garment section, or spliced and patched to create new design lines where none existed previously.

Offbeat vests, generally cut full and square, are layered over denim or silk shirts and soft pants. Look for vests in mixed patterns, such as a Navajo stripe, a plaid and synthetic suede, or with borderline-funky details such as zip fronts and braid trims.

The season's newest sweaters are loose variations of the turtle-neck in luxury blends of cashmere and silk. Interesting details include wide collars that can be turned over and over to form a deep roll and neckline zippers.

Sportswear in general favors deep, woody colors like spruce, black denim and khaki. Favorite outerwear coverups include field jacket and the baseball jacket.

Leather follows as a close second to the traditional menswear fabrications. Trompe l'oeil effects produce dresses that masquerade as vest and skirt combos.

The white shirt is the natural accompaniment to the suit and tie, ing yokes.

Knits make news in Glamour girl sweater sets, including skinny tube skirts that hit anywhere from just below the knee to just above the ankle and ankle-skimming cardigans.

This season's era-of-influence is the early '70s. Contributions include bandleader jackets that pay homage to Sergeant Pepper, Mad Hatter hats, Platform shoes, chunky heeled granny boots and high tops.

Suits are undergoing changes so subtle they're barely noticeable, one button closings, slightly rounded shoulders and fabrics with microscopic designs. From afar, the effect is a unified solid. Up close, small patterns are visible.

This trend is affecting the sportshirt market. Many companies
