

Local students attend agricultural institute

Tinea Degraffinreadt and Cornelius Mason of West Forsyth High School participated in the Institute for Future Agricultural Leaders on the campus of North Carolina A&T State University June 21-26.

The week-long institute selected high school students with an interest in agricultural careers and introduced students to educational opportunities at a land-grant university that challenged students to groom their leadership and citizenship skills. The program was designed to further educate tomorrow's agricultural leaders.

The institute was co-sponsored by the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation and A&T State University.

Sloan to attend women's conference in Nigeria

Brenda D. Sloan, special collections librarian at Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg, Va., and former resident of Winston-Salem, will attend the First International Conference on Women in Africa and the African Diaspora: Bridges Across Activism and the Academy, in Nigeria, July 11-25.

Sloan received funding for the conference from the college's faculty development and international program committee.

LeRoy S. Strohl, director of the library, says the library uses the expertise of all librarians in collection development.

In the past, Sloan has worked in the areas of women's studies and African-American culture.

No one has covered the African continent. Sloan will be able to further the collection development in these areas, adding to the library support of the cultural diversity.

"This golden opportunity is an integral part of my personal and professional development — it will broaden my views about African women and their cultures, enable me to learn from my international colleagues' experience, and allow me to return to my ancestral home."

There will be a post-conference travel to Enugu, Lagos, Ife, Ibadan, and Oshogbo.

Sloan is the daughter of Mrs. Evelyn S. Sloan and the late Rev. Louis R. Sloan.
