

Packers Prevail Over Rams

Flag Division

The Packers and the Rams battled to a 6-6 tie. "The kids are playing better," said Jerry Essic, Packers coach. "We are rebuilding the team and the kids are having fun."

Junior Pee Wees

Deonzo Amos and David Eldridge led the Packers with a combined five touchdowns en route to a 38-0 blowout. The victory improves their record to 5-0 and keeps them in first place in the American League. Antonio Lowery also contributed to the victory with a touchdown run. Jarrett Brewer and Lewis Thompson led a strong defensive effort. Jacob Hopkins set the pace on the offensive line.

Pee Wees

The Packers used a total team effort to blank the Rams 13-0. Josh Hicks, filling in for the starting center, provided some excellent support in the shut out. Jessie Allen and Scott Coffman's blocking paved the way for productive runs by Ron Vaughn and Wes Miller.

Execution and determination were the keys in the Packers 49-0 rout. "The team executed harder and played harder than they have in any game this year," said Jerry Stoltz, Packers coach.

Dancing boots

The Packers Senior Dancing Boots won first place at the Cheerleading Competition held at South Stokes High School last Sunday.

Tracy Medina is the coach. Medina is assisted by Kelly Brown and Carolyn Jones. "We are very proud of our girls," Medina said. "They worked hard and deserved first place. All of those practices paid off for them."

garet Morey, consultant for junior golf promotions with the United States Golf Association, estimates that there are more than 4,500 junior golf programs in the country while only 50 are black.

In order for national programs to succeed, junior golf advocates insist that each facet of the community has to become involved.

"In most communities, the people just haven't taken the time," said Bill Dickey, president of the National Minority Junior Golf Scholarship Fund. "It takes the resources and especially dedication, which includes the parents, if any junior program is going to work."

A number of minority junior programs have been labeled as duplicates of mainstream junior programs that already exist.

Martin disagrees and insists that her program is unique. Martin's program operates on an annual budget of $180,000. The budget pays Martin's salary, buys all of the golf equipment, pays all green fees and allows non-restricted course access. In addition, the program provides transportation for the youngsters and pays the Los Angeles area professionals who assist the youngsters in learning the game.

The program also has an array of sponsors, which includes the Centel Corporation, Ping and Reebok. "I simply walked up to these people at the PGA shows and asked them to support our efforts," Martin said.

In a prepared press release, John P. Frazee Jr., Centel's chairman and chief executive officer said, "Junior golf is the foundation of the game, and teaches sportsmanship, integrity and perseverance, while providing lifelong rewards."

The program has also borrowed the Ping color code system. "They were gracious enough to donate Ping merchandise and allow us to use their patented system," Martin said.

Said Charles Meecham, LPGA commissioner: "I can't think of anything a company is able to participate in, for the money that is required, that will make a greater impact on the corporate community. It can't be conducted cheaply if it's going to be done correctly."
