

Little's Art Expresses Childhood Memories

Glenda Wharton-Little, a professional artist on the faculty at Winston-Salem State University, has created a site-specific arts installation, "The Crawl Space," which deals with issues of repressed child and childhood fantasies. The installation will be on display from Feb 2 through March 29 at the university's Diggs Gallery.

Viewers participate in the work by walking through four different rooms: "The Child's Room," "The Sick Room," "The Room of Transformation," and "The Womb Chamber." The multimedia installation incorporates sculpture, found objects, painting, video and viewer interaction.

Wharton-Little has exhibited at the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art and the Sawtooth Center for Visual Design in Winston-Salem the Corcoran Museum of Art in Washington, DC; the Greenhill Center for Art, located in Greensboro; and the Diggs Gallery at Winston-Salem State University.

The Winston-Salem native is a graduate of North Carolina State University. She received a bachelor's degree in fine arts from the Corcoran School and a master's of fine arts from Columbia University. Wharton-Little has taught art and art history at WSSU since 1989. She also is a freelance illustrator and graphic designer and has mastered many different media, from glass-blowing to video to painting and drawing. Wharton-Little is a 1991 recipient of an artists fellowship from the Arts Council of Winston-Salem/Forsyth County.

The Diggs Gallery at Winston-Salem State University is open 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturdays.

The gallery is located in the lower level of O'Kelly Library.

The public is invited to attend. There is no charge for admission.

Glenda Wharton-Little's art installation is a participatory includes pleasant and unpleasant images from childhood.
