

Little Begins Second Year with Chargers

Kevin Little, defensive end for the San Diego Chargers

Kevin Little, former All-MEAC defensive end/outside linebacker from North Carolina A&T University, will begin his second year with the San Diego Chargers when he reports to camp Thursday at UC-San Diego in La Jolla, Calif. Little was drafted in the fifth round last year but was placed on injured reserve after pre-season.

His attorney, said, "Little has worked hard to prepare himself to make the active roster this year. He has even added 15 pounds of muscle as requested by Coach Bobby Ross."

Little now measures in at 6'4" and 260 pounds.

Freeman Starts Every Game

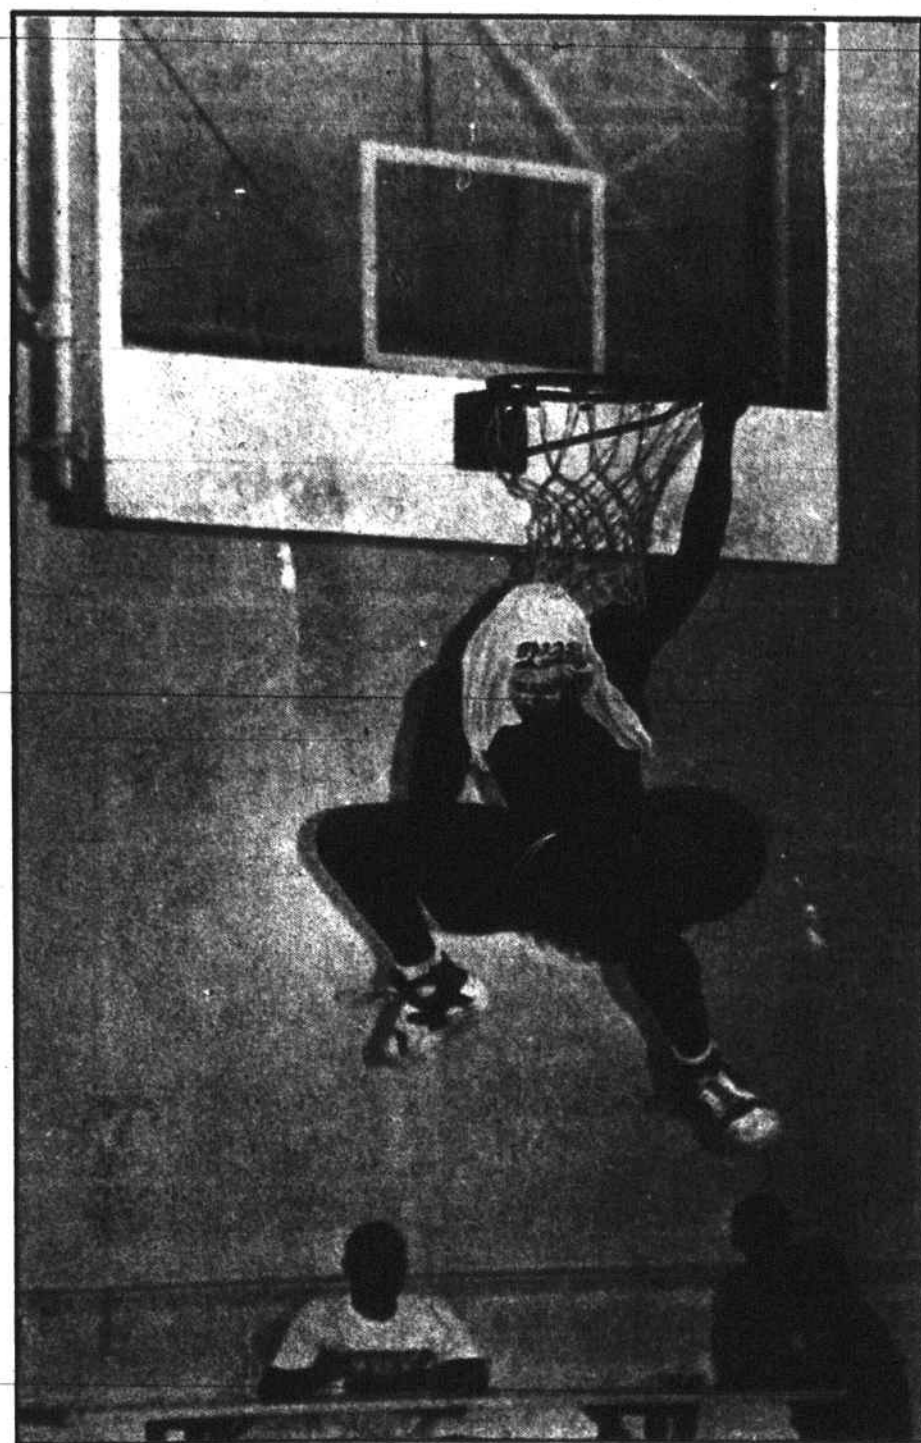

Russell Freeman, former offensive tackle standout at Georgia Institute of Technology, was the only "rookie" free agent in the NFL last season to start every regular season game.

Freeman, 6'7" and 305 pounds, performed so impressively last year for the Denver Broncos that he was able to renegotiate and sign a two-year deal with an average annual salary worth four times the amount he was suppose to receive this year.

Freeman's attorney, Mason Ashe said, "The Broncos would like Freeman to be their starting right tackle this season in place of their 13-year veteran Ken Lanier, whose contract the Broncos decided not to renew."

Terry Signs with the Bears

John Terry, former All-CIAA offensive lineman from Livingston College in Salisbury, signed a one-year contract with the Chicago Bears last week.

Terry, 6'4" and 300 pounds, was drafted in the tenth round last year by the NFL Champion Dallas Cowboys, but was released during the last wave of cuts due to the 47-man roster rule.

According to Terry's attorney Mason Ashe, "Bears offensive line coach Tony Wise, formally with the Cowboys, was very impressed with Terry last year. Wise believes Terry can contribute at tackle, guard, and center."
