Questions & Answers on recovering from grief

Q. My husband died after a short illness. He was much older than I and we had been married only two years. I sense that there is less empathy for me than for other widows who have a longer history with the man they loved.

A. The time two people have had together is not the most important factor in grief. The intensity of that time or the level of involvement is a strong determinant in the way one grieves. There are no comparisons to be made in the grief process. It is far too individual and personal to measure.

Questions asked during bereavement classes are answered by the editor of AFTER LOSS. For a free copy of one of our new little booklets, Grief is a Process, Not an Event or I Never Know What To Say! please call or stop by.
