New Trends In Fashion Are Coming the Fall

The persons that inspire fall '93 fashion inhabit a diverse world, from the mountains of the Tyrol to the monasteries of the Middle Ages.

Velvet is the single most important fabric of the season, notes The Soap and Detergent Association. In plain, crushed, panne, cut or tie dyed interpretations, it adds romance for day and evening.

Velvet jackets, stretch velvet jumpers, velvet lapels pair up with the season's full spectrum of fabrics, including gabardines, crepes, georgettes, denims, tweeds, brocades and chiffons.

Minimal, monastic clothes bring the Middle Ages to modern times. Simplistic styling, longer hemlines and purity of detail are the antithesis of the opulence of the previous decade. Body clinging empire style and cassock like dresses are favorites. Colors are subdued. Black and grey take prominence, with steel blue, navy, eggplant and treebark brown in supporting roles.

Accessories are restricted to the bare essentials: buttons blend in, jewelry is limited to crosses and other, usually over-sized, religious icons. For serious outerwear, fashion favors the long great coat. It adds a sweeping military presence that recalls the regal past of the Czars.

The pristine white shirt is everywhere, with everything from serious suits to flamboyant frock coats inspired by the Edwardian age. French cuffs, elongated shirttails (fully visible beneath the jacket's hem), ascots, poet collars, extravagant neck bows and tuxedo fronts pay homage to Keats, Shelley, Lord Byron and Beau Brummel.

Fashion chronicles the Heidi look with a wide range of interpretations inspired by Austria and the Swiss Alps, Dirndl skirts, boiled wool jackets, peasant-style embroidered blouses, criss-cross lacings and corset-let vest are being worn to create a theatrical effect. Bits and pieces, including leggings, thick sweaters with Alpine touches, loden jackets and pants with suspenders, will blend into a classic wardrobe.

Menswear fashions are undergoing a subtle, but important, philosophical change, reports The Soap and Detergent Association. This season designers are breaking away from the rigid differentiation between business and sportswear apparel. As a result, the newest business suits are soft and drapery, with the comfort of an unlined sport coat. Add a dress shirt and repp tie and its the perfect nine-to-five ensemble.

Substitute a denim shirt or t-shirt and the same suit comfortably switches to a more relaxed mode.

The traditional three-piece suit has a new fashion role, too. The vest set - tailored jacket and vest of the same fabric - is paired to coordinating trousers. Favored fabrics are those with high visual appeal, including tweeds, herringbones, tartans and window pane plaids.

The unmatched vest celebrates patchwork in unique fabric mixes, such as neck-ware silks, antique quilt squares, or even recycled ties and kimonos. These off beat vests go mainstream with conventional suit and tie or add a bit of sartorial splendor to dressed-down blue jeans. Ties have a license to please. Where's Waldo? Save the children. The Beatles, The World Wildlife Fund and NFL teams logos are among the season's hottest tie motifs.

Another new trend is the covercoat - an outer layer that combines the tailored, lapelled dressiness of a sport jacket with the informal practicality of outerwear. It can be worn alone or on cold days, atop another coat or jacket.

Innovations in the fiber industry are the catalysts for some exciting developments in men's fashions. Polyester/wool/Lycra dress slacks keep gentlemen travelers neat and comfortable. Plastic Polyester soda bottles take on a new life when recycled into EcoSpun, a polyester fiber soft enough to be knitted into fleecewear fabrics. Washable wool, long popular in European markets, is U.S. bound.

A special chlorination process results in a wool that can be washed like cotton. On the horizon are tailored, yet casual, winter slacks made from woven washable wool and polyester blends.
