

College Asks Students For Police Clearance

RALEIGH (AP) — A college shaken last year by a slaying, the shooting of a child and a dorm robbery is asking applicants for a letter from their hometown police department certifying whether they have a criminal record.

"There's no reason to bring Jack the Ripper on campus just because he applied," said St. Augustine's College spokesman Tracey Todd. "We are looked at as the guardians of students while they're here and their parents look to us provide the best possible safety."

The request was made of all 3,400 people who applied to the historically black college as freshmen or transfer students this year, said Wanzo Hendrix, admissions director at the 1,900-student school. About 95 percent complied.

A few reported criminal backgrounds, said Wiley Davis, vice president for student affairs.

"It doesn't necessarily mean a student will be turned down,"

Davis said. "But if he was on probation for murder, we wouldn't take him."

On campus during the past year, a student was shot to death and another was charged with murder; an 8-year-old was shot outside a gym during a basketball game; and four students were held up in their dormitory room by a masked man.

Many colleges ask applicants whether they have been convicted of a crime.

But Dorothy Siegel, executive director of the national Campus Violence Prevention Center, said her organization knows of no other four-year U.S. college requesting a letter from the police.

"Some institutions are looking for ways to relieve themselves of liability," she said. "There's been a lot of heat over whether campuses are responsible for the behavior of students."

Did You Hear The One About The Guy Who Paid More For A Luxury Sedan That Depreciated Faster?

Let's face it, you wouldn't exactly be chuckling if you had just spent thousands of dollars more on another car and discovered that the Lexus LS has retained more of its original value than any other car in its class.* Nor would you be terribly amused to find it's priced so incredibly low.

On the other hand, if you test drive a 1993 LS today, you could find yourself laughing all the way to the office, the country and eventually the bank.
