

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Author Maya Angelou to Read at Wake Forest for Hunger Relief

Maya Angelou

Author Maya Angelou will participate in a national project to fight hunger by reading her poetry at Wake Forest University on Oct. 5.

The local event, which begins at 7:30 p.m. in Brendle Recital Hall, will also feature readings of original poetry by Wake Forest faculty, students and friends.

All proceeds from the readings will go to national and local hunger relief programs.

Nationwide, writers such as Russell Baker, Gwendolyn Brooks, Clyde Edgerton, Joyce Carol Oates and William Styron will be participating in Writers Harvest.

The literacy benefit is sponsored by Share Our Strength, a hunger relief organization that works to prevent hunger through grants, public education and community outreach.

Tickets, available at the door, are $10; $5 for students. For information, call 759-5383.

▲ Training workshop

A video-broadcast training session on the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) will be held at Forsyth Technical Community College, Nov. 5, from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The session is designed for persons with disabilities as well as for family, friends, and employers of persons with disabilities. The trainers will teach the specific rights of the disabled as free and equal citizens.

The deadline for registering is Oct. 15. All participants will receive lunch and any accessible features they may need to participate in the training session. A fee of $4 will be charged.

The event is sponsored by the Governor's Advocacy Council for People with Disabilities, Programs for Accessible Living, NC Council on Developmental Disabilities, NC Agency for Public Telecommunication, Easter Seals Society and other advocacy organizations. Call Paula Compton, 723-0371 ext. 383, for more information or to register.

▲ Local Appointed

The National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials (NAHRO) has appointed William H. Andrews of Winston-Salem to serve a two-year term on its Commissioners Committee beginning Oct. 27.

The committee addresses a broad range of issues regarding low-income housing and community and economic development and the roles local Commissioners play in this process.

Andrews is the chairman of the Housing Authority of the City of Winston-Salem Board of Commissioners.

"Arts and Ethics" Conference

The Sawtooth Center for Visual Art will present "Art and Ethics: Coming Together for a Change," Oct. 29-30. The two-day conference seeks to promote a respect for cultural differences by looking at the diverse visual languages and aesthetics existing within the community.

The outreach program is planned to encourage interaction between artists, curators, low and middle-income youths and adults and other members of the public.

No registration fee is required, as underwriting for the event has been provided by foundation support and by the Arts Council of Winston-Salem and Forsyth County.

The symposium will begin with a bus tour of three local galleries with workshops and lectures related to exhibits offered at each site. At Reynolda House Museum of American Art, director Nicholas Bragg will lead a workshop, "Examining Prejudice through American Art." At the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art, Atlanta photographic artist Lynn Marshall Linnemeier will speak on "Personal Narratives: Women Photographers of Color," an exhibit by five African-American women artists curated by Jeff Fleming.

At the Arts Council Board Room Gallery, Hope Sandrow's "The Other Side of the Rainbow," an interactive exhibition which examines the topic of sexual abuse of men, women and children, will be discussed.
