Lythcott to Speak at Moravian Church

Lythcott is a native of Guyana and now resides in New York where he attends the Moravian Church. Before working in Somalia, he spent 7 years in the Middle East, first in the UN Emergency Force and then in the UN Interim

Lythcott is not an ordained minister, but he sees his work as lay person as vital. He writes, "I think what the church needs today is, not more ordained ministers as important as they are, but more committed lay people who are willing to follow Christ into the world to declare his Name by word and by deed."
