Hayes Shows Proteges He Is Still The Boss

By JEROME RICHARD

A grim-faced Bill Hayes, hardly breaking stride, quickly shook Kermit Blount's hand as he passed the Winston-Salem State University head coach following North Carolina A&T's 53-7 thrashing of the Rams last Saturday in Greensboro. But when Hayes confronted WSSU quarterback coach Dana Walker, he stopped momentarily, rested a hand on the young assistant's shoulder, and leaning toward him, chatted briefly.

Just an old warhorse giving a young cub a pointer or two? No, but it could have been a grandfather asking about his grandchildren.

"He congratulated me and said he doesn't know how good his team is or how good his running backs are," said Walker, who is married to Hayes' daughter Sherri and has two children. "He couldn't judge his team because we weren't a challenge for them today. I'm frustrated because our kids didn't come to play. If we had played well, the score wouldn't be what it is, but you can't taking anything away from A&T. They played an excellent game and Coach Hayes did an excellent job coaching."

Walker had trouble focusing on his emotions about squaring off against his father-in-law for the first time because of the lopsided score and the manner in which the Rams played.

"I was excited about the game and playing against my father-in-law," he said. "I came to win and he came to win. The emotions left a long time ago. Once the game started it was just like going against another team. Sure, I wanted to do well against my father-in-law, but the truth is we didn't."

That may be an understatement. A&T dominated every phase of the game, rolling up 408 yards in total offense to the Rams' 134. The Aggies sprinted to a 32-0 halftime lead, scoring three times on touchdown passes by quarterback

Spartan Spikers break into win column after winless start

By JEROME RICHARD

Last week was a watershed week for the Mount Tabor junior varsity volleyball team.

The Spartans broke into the win column with victories over South Rowan Sept. 8 and Glenn Sept. 7, ending an 0-4 skid to start the season. The only blemish on the three-game skein that started Sept. 6 was a loss to powerful West Forsyth. The Spartans blasted South Rowan 15-1, 15-10 and avenged an earlier loss to Glenn with a 16-14, 15-13 victory. They lost to West Forsyth 15-2, 15-3. The 2-1 mark bumped up the Spartans' record to 2-4 for the year.

Mount Tabor dominated South Rowan in the opening match of the best-of-three series behind the serving of Tori Castleman.

"Tori scored points one through five to start the match and then finished it off by serving points 10 through 15," Spartan coach Michelle Jett, who stuck with her starting line up the entire game, said. "Tori had a total of 16 points in the match, which is over half our points. The key was South Rowan couldn't return our serves."

The opposite was true in the second game as Mount Tabor's Midas Touch on its serves went south, allowing South Rowan to rally from a 12-5 deficit and make the game interesting at the end.

"They came back because we couldn't get our serve over," Jett
