Careful Planning Will Boost Extra Closet Space

Just as the potatoes, bread and plastic wrap need a place of their own in the kitchen, so do the shoes, sheets and soap in the bedroom and bath.

Clothes and accessories take up closets and drawers while towels, tubes and bottles often accumulate in a too-small linen cabinet.

Some careful planning will boost bedroom closet space to more than you thought possible. First, sort. But ruthless and get rid of clothes that have not been worn for ages. Even if you think the style may come back. Will it be your style by then?

Next, give thought to adjusting clothes rods and closet shelves to get more space. A lumber dealer can easily cut shelves to your size and brackets are available for easy installation.

Attach hooks to the closet wall for belts and necklaces or cafe curtain rods for neckties. Mounted lower on the door in a child's closet these hooks and rods help promote tidiness with tots.

Another good idea for a child's room is keeping laundry baskets lined up for toys and games.

Take the clutter out of linen closets by storing items closer to where they are used rather than in that central location. Sheets might be more conveniently kept on a shelf in a bedroom closet, for example. Shampoos should be stored close to wherever hair is washed.

Put a space maker drawer under the linen closet shelf for a good storage area for washcloths and finger tip towels. Slide-out drawers make it easier to reach items in deep closets. Labeling the drawers is an aid to keeping order as well as a help to other family members.

Unless your home is blessed with bathroom built-ins, storage space is no doubt a minimum. So take a tour of bath shops in department stores and bath boutiques or shop the mail order catalogs for ideas.

There are many attractive, easily installed portable fixtures to help you bring more space and better organization to the bath. There are self and cabinet fixtures for on top of or over the toilet tank.

A variety of storage bins can be attached to the back of a door for toiletries. Even colorful vegetable bins for the kitchen make good containers for cleaning supplies in a hideaway place.

A cabinet drawer will come to instant order with drawer organizers that separate the curlers from the clips and combs.

Aside from the shelves and a built-in cabinet or two, most hideaway space in living rooms comes with furniture. When buying furniture for dens and family rooms remember that a coffee table or an end stand can often provide an extra drawer or small cabinet to stretch storage.

Once you get the better-storage-bug, you might as well organize from top to bottom. Keep in mind that attics are usually warm and dry, while basements tend to be damp and cool. Store accordingly. Label boxes so their contents will not be forgotten during their often long-term storage. A regular check of these areas is on order for insect and pest control.

For the workshop there are numerous ideas to keep it just as neat and tidy as any place in the house. Pegboards on the wall keep workbenches clear of tools and supplies. Tool caddies and carry caddies also store workbench equipment and tools and you can carry them right to the job.

A couple of large refuse containers are a must to hold scraps and debris from handyman's projects and to hold usable scrap lumber.

Now give the same organizational attention to away-from-the-house working and storing spots.

Although designed to accommodate the family automobiles, the garage more often than not is filled with bikes, garden tools and barbecue equipment.

An easily installed on-the-wall gardener shelf and tool organizer keeps supplies and gardening tools up, out-of-the-way, and yet convenient. The garden hose can be coiled on a rustproof hose rack also mounted on the wall.

Pegboards serve the same organizational purpose in a tool shed or garage as at the workbench.

Together with these racks and accessories, out-buildings can be turned into well-kept, convenient storage areas.

Laundry has a way of piling up and piling out of a hamper. And with the wide variety of fabrics available today, sorting items according to color and fiber at wash time is more important than ever.

Place a group of laundry baskets near your washer and dryer so similar items can be placed together. When the basket is full, you'll have a full load for washing.

Use the basket to transport the clean, folded laundry back to where it belongs through-out the house.

You can find Rubbermaid, and other brand name organizers that will be quite convenient and economical.
