Phillips, and Brad Ceaser controlling the backboard for Tech. Roanoke wasn't able to close the gap.

"We played great defense on our halfcourt trap and our big kids controlled the glass," Hollingsworth said. "The key was execution. We played within our system except that one stretch where Roanoke took a momentary lead. The kids did a good job of determining when to run and not run and they played very unselfish. They saw Rusty had the hot hand and fed him the ball. We had balanced scoring beyond Rusty."

Curtis Coleman scored nine points in the winning effort and Foster, Carter, Campbell, and Ceaser had eight points each.

Phillips finished with five points and Will Parker added three. Campbell and Ceaser led the Third Wave in rebounding with 12 boards apiece.

"I can't say enough about Foster," Hollingsworth said. "He was like a coach on the floor. He made sure the things we wanted to do were done."

The Demons had a big advantage at the charity stripe where they hit 18 of 29 attempts compared to Parkland's 6 of 20 shooting at the line. The Mustangs were equally cold both from the field and the charity stripe in the third quarter, going 5:04 without scoring to fall but our shot selection was not that good," Brayboy said. "One off the reasons our shooting was off was that we got tired and when you get tired you lose concentration, and that is what happened at the end."

The Mustangs pulled within 52-48 on Jeff Henighan's jumper with 3:11 remaining, but Reynolds ran off six unanswered points to grab a 58-50 lead with 1:46 to play to sow up the victory.

"In the second half we made ourselves known in the paint," Kitley said. "We always want to get it inside."

West led all scorers with 18 points. Amos added 16 and Thomas contributed 12 for the Demons. Charles Dearmon led the Mustangs with 14 points and Carlos McLaurin had 10.
