Guild Renders Support to Urban League

Joan Cardwell, president of the Winston-Salem Urban League Guild, talks enthusiastically about the role of the Guild. "Our Children = Our Destiny" is the new theme for the Urban League. The Guild president states that, "The Guild strives to make contributions to our youth by providing scholarship awards and participating in other educational programs and events of the League. The Reading Olympiad, one such program sponsored by the League, appears on target for helping our youth develop intellectually as they pursue the challenges ahead in the 21st century."

"THE POWER OF COLOR '95-96" headlines this year's 38th production of the Ebony Fashion Fair to be held Friday, November 3, at 8 p.m. at the M.C. Benton Convention Center. The Ebony Fashion Fair benefits the Guild's scholarship awards and the Urban League programs. The Guild has sponsored the Ebony Fashion since it was first held in Winston-Salem in 1957.

The Urban League Guild is a group of community volunteers organized more than 37 years ago to act as a public relations link between the Urban League and the community. The Guild enhances the local affiliate in program implementation and gives financial support. The pledge of this group of volunteers is to "strengthen, promote and perpetuate the mission and progress of the Urban League."

Joan Cardwell

Dedicated Guild volunteers lend their support in a number of areas such as the Reading Olympiad and Earning-by-Learning programs. The Guild also assists with the League's annual Christmas dinner and offers a helping hand with Health Fairs, Thanksgiving and Christmas food baskets for seniors, and the coordination of recruiting sessions for college preparatory schools.

The Guild is totally committed to its involvement in the League's annual Equal Opportunity Day, Founders' Black & White Gala, "Celebrating Our Cultural Diversity."

Cardwell makes a conscious effort to include political awareness as a part of the Guild's monthly agenda. Two on-going projects continue to be voter registration and education about primary and general elections including Municipal elections and Bond Referendum elections.

Highlights
The 1995 National Urban League Southern Regional Assembly was held in Kissimmee, Florida at the Hyatt Orlando Hotel and Convention Center on March 17 and 18. The highlight of the occasion was the Regional Volunteer Service Award Luncheon which is sponsored by the Urban League Guilds. Each year, an affiliate Urban League Guild is awarded the Community Service Award for outstanding service in their respective communities. This year, the Winston-Salem Urban League Guild received the Volunteer Service Award in recognition for the Reading Olympiad Program. The mission of this program is to promote increased reading among African American students, and to increase their exposure to Black history and literature. Reading Olympiad also encourages middle school students to read and compete in cognitive and fun-filled activities. More than two hundred (200) students registered for the competition. The Urban League Guild served as sponsors and chat-persons.

Last year, the Winston-Salem Urban League Guild nominated Delores J. Smith, the Winston-Salem Urban League's President/CEO for the honor of "CEO of the Year for the Southern Region of the National Urban League." She was awarded this honor.
