

Artists Catlett and Logan to Give Talks at Diggs' Opening Reception

Elizabeth Catlett and Juan Logan, two artists whose works are imbued with social commentary, will give talks at the opening reception of their exhibitions at Diggs Gallery at 7:30 p.m., November 10.

The opening, which will begin at 6 p.m., features the shows "Elizabeth Catlett: Works on Paper, 1944-1992," and "not separate and apart from: an installation by Juan Logan." The public is invited, and admission is free.

Catlett, who will be arriving from Mexico where she has made her home for decades with her artist-husband, is known for her strong style that embodies the imagery of Mexican muralists and graphic artists as well as her African-American heritage and experience. Catlett explores themes centered around socio-political conditions, and particularly those affecting black women and their circumstances. During the Depression, while studying at Howard University, she learned from such master printmakers and designers as James Porter, James L. Wells and Lois Mailou Jones. And later, while at the State University of Iowa, she worked with painter Grant Wood, who encouraged her to paint and sculpt what she knew best, thus leading her to the subject matters that distinguish her works.

The Diggs exhibit, composed of 73 drawings and prints, is the first comprehensive assemblage of Catlett's prints. The show was organized by Hampton University Museum. Catlett on last exhibited in Winston-Salem was held at the Delta Arts Center in 1986.

Juan Logan's exhibition of eight predominantly steel sculptures is intended to draw viewers into the monumental forms and confront them with such difficult issues as injustice, hatred, domestic violence, racism and homelessness. Logan, who resides in Belmont, N.C. is one of the artists (Catlett, among them) whose works are part of Winston-Salem State's permanent art collection. A painter as well as a sculptor, Logan is widely known for creating art that deal with the human condition and social responsibility.

In addition to the gallery talks, entertainment will be provided by the WSSU Burke Singers. Former state legislator, Annie Brown Kennedy, will also be on hand to welcome Catlett, both of whom attended Spelman College.

The Catlett show is being sponsored by the North Carolina Arts Council and The Arts Council of Winston-Salem/Forsyth County.

The exhibitions will be on display through January 13. For more information, Call Diggs Gallery at 750-2458.
