Community Photo Guidelines

Please send us only professionally done photos with your articles and announcements. Good studio color photos are the best. We scan all of our photos electronically and must start with a good photo in order to produce a clear crisp image on newsprint. If you take the photo yourself, make sure you have enough light to expose everyone in the picture.

We sincerely appreciate the support you have given us thus far. We look forward to giving you the kind of newspaper that will make you proud.

Thank you.

Here are some guidelines:

- Please take photos up close. The closer you are, the better the picture will look in the paper.
- Photocopies, newspaper clippings, overexposed pictures and dark photos cannot be used.
- Avoid taking photos in the shade or against dark backgrounds.
- Make sure faces are easily identifiable.
- Subjects doing some type of activity is preferable to posed shots.

"BB&T took everything into consideration - all our life experiences, all the work we were willing to put in with our own hands - not just that we were a new business."

"They have the professionalism. They have the guts. They have the ability to say, 'No, but maybe we can do it this way,' or 'Let's look at it this way.' They're interested in me being successful."

"My business is not a big business, but we're growing steadily. And our needs change from day to day. At BB&T, I have the confidence in knowing that if I need something, there's a good chance that I'll get it."

Starting a new business is stressful enough without listening to some banker tell you how many fail every year. So at BB&T, we make you this simple promise: We'll tell you straight out if we can help. We'll tell you straight out if we think there's a better way. But most of all, before we open our mouths to tell you anything, we open our ears to listen. And we open our minds to new ideas.
