

RECOGNIZES

Floy Howie

Volunteer of the Yea

VALUING EDUCATION

early a decade ago, a disability forced Floy Howie as an inspector at Gallo's. Today, she walks with the help of crutch- job permanently. es, but her disability has not ham-An active volunteer, Howie is com- fails to miss an important meeting ers, especially youth.

She chairs the Black Leadership Roundtable Education Committee and moved the issue of black stumunity's agenda. Her efforts have er. been a catalyst for other grassroots initiatives that hold the school system accountable and offer interventions, such as home-based achievement gap.

"It is critical for parents K-12 to make sure that our children get a good education," says Howie. "Our youth are our future."

Howie is also active in Democratic party politics. She serves as a block captain, as president of the Happy Hill Neighborhood Community Association and as Sims Center's precinct chairperson. Residents asked her to temporarily serve as precinct chair after Sims, her predecessor, died. Though his were big shoes to fill, Howie to retire from her position proved so effective that her constituents asked that she take the

"She does not drive," says N.C. pered her community involvement. Rep. Larry Womble, "but never mitted to make life better for oth- on issues of importance to the African-American community, especially when it comes to the education of our children."

Howie's early role models were dent achievement onto the com- her mother, aunt and grandmoth-

"They were strong Christian women," she says, "who knew how to do a lot with a little."

A Charlotte native, Howie study groups, to address the inherited not only her foremothers' resourcefulness but also their warmth.

"I try to get along with everybody and I'm able to get the cooperation from other people," she

A widowed mother of three and grandmother of two, Howie tutors at Diggs Elementary School and serves as secretary of the Senior Missionary Department at Christ Rescue Temple Apostolic Church.

"She richly deserves this recognition," says Womble.

THE COMMUNITY YOU SERVE SALUTES YOU