THE ROYAL COURT

Sunrise Towers crowns king and queen at first-ever June Jubilee

BY T. KEVIN WALKER
THE CHRONICLE

The sun had barely set on Sunrise Towers Friday before the music started blaring and the smell of hot dogs and burgers on a grill began to waft through open windows in the high-rise building. The sounds and smells attracted many of the 200 people who call Sunrise Towers home. They came by foot, wheelchair and walkers, many decked in their finest suits and dresses.

It was the first time that Sunrise had held its June Jubilee — a fun mix of food, music, dance and fellowship — but after last week's success, residents hope to have many, many more.

"We are just trying to let our residents know that there is still life and good times after a certain age," said Wallace Andrews, president of the Sunrise Towers residents' council.

The towers, located along Martin Luther King Jr. Drive, once served primarily as housing for the elderly, but in recent years the complex has opened its doors to people of all ages. The June Jubilee saw a good mix of senior citizens and middle-age people. Sunrise Towers' residents are a tight bunch, but property manager Barbara Simmons said residents' busy schedules often keep them from spending quality time together.

To remedy that, every so often the residents' council organizes a social event, things like Bingo tournaments and potlucks.

"They enjoy getting out of their apartments and coming together for things like this," Simmons said.

The success of the June Jubilee will actually make it possible for Sunrise Towers residents to get together more in the future. The event was partly a fund-raiser. Residents sold tickets to the event to raise money. They sold nearly $200 in tickets, money that will be used to fund future gatherings.

The top ticket sellers were honored during the June Jubilee by being crowned king and queen of the event.
