Activist theologian urges public to work in community

BY TIMOTHY RAMSEY FOR THE CHRONICLE

Rahiel Tesfamariam has taken the torch from the African-American leaders of the past and looks to continue with the fight for justice and equality for all.

Tesfamariam is an activist, writer and theologian. She delivered a powerful message on the struggle of the black community Thursday, Feb. 4, on the campus of Wake Forest University. She touched on a myriad of topics such as white privilege and the recent killings of young black men, as well as religion, to name a few.

Tesfamariam is the founder and publisher of Urban Cusp online magazine and former columnist Washington Post. She has degrees from Stanford University and Yale divinity school. She is a native of the war-torn nation of Eritrea in East Africa and was raised in the District of Demi Day, a hip hop/spoken word artist and student at Wake Forest School of Divinity, preceded Tesfamariam with an insightful original song and spoken word poem that encouraged individuals to step outside the realm of social media to bring light to a cause and actually go out into the community and participate hands on.

When asked how someone gets more involved in the community, Tesfamariam said, "Definitely turn locally and inward. Focus on the fact that you should start every revolution internally and knowing there is always a need locally. Find that church, school, or nonprofit that is in need and see where that journey takes you. Don't assume that you are called for national work; most work is done at Tesfamariam said she had a vision as a young child to be able to use the power of the spoken word to invoke change, and with the manifestation of her dream now becoming a reality, she is humbled,

Nearly 200 attend bonding Super Bowl Party at St. Peter's

Tesfamariam

BY TEVIN STINSON THE CHRONICLE

Eyes across the nation were glued to their TVs Sunday evening when the Carolina Panthers took on the Denver Broncos in Super Bowl 50. While many watched the game at a bar or restaurant, more than 200 men and young boys made their way to St. Peter's World Ottreach Center (SPWO) for the Father and Son Potluck Super Bowl Party.

The event is designed to cultivate the bond between fathers and their sons while watching the biggest game of the year. Although everyone was asked to bring at least one dish, the event was free and open to the public,

Coordinator of the event, the Rev. Paul Sheff, said the idea for the potluck became a reality in 2012 and has grown every year since. According to Sheff, around 20 people attended the event the first year it was held at a local hotel.

"The event has grown tremendously over the years," he said. "It has become one of our most anticipated events."

Prior to kickoff, those in attendance enjoyed playing games like ping pong, and cornhole while they made predictions on the outcome of the game. As the time for kickoff drew closer, everyone began to make their way to their seats in front of the giant screen set up inside the administration building on the campus of SPWO.

As the teams took the field, cheers erupted from the dozens of Panthers' supporters in attendance. Although they lost the game 24-10, Sheff, a proud Panthers' fan, said the fact that the team made it that far made this year's game more exciting.

"Not too many teams make it to the Super Bowl with one loss on their record, so this year's game has a lot of added excite-

Feast of Weeks

Lesson Scripture: Leviticus 23:15-22

By the end of this lesson, we will *Examine the Feast of Weeks found in Leviticus *Celebrate the joy and thanksgiving times of giving God what belongs to Him and the needy *Commit to a life plan of returning to God a portion of what has been received and sharing with those in need

Background: The seventh day of the week was blessed and sanctified by God in Genesis 2:3. The observance of the Sabbath was not required until Exodus 16:23 in the wilderness. The Sabbath separated people from their work and everyday activities (Exodus 35:2-3). Breaking the Sabbath was punishable by death (Numbers 15:32-36). The Feast of Weeks was also known as Pentecost meaning fifty, and was an appointed feast celebrated annually. There was a one-day festival and sacrifices attended by all able-bodied Jewish men. The Feast of Weeks usually took place in late spring celebrating the first fruits of the wheat harvest. The feast took place exactly 50 days after the second day of Passover.

Lesson: After the Israelites settled Canaan and farmed the land, they were to follow observances to demonstrate their gratitude for the bounty God had given them. They were to bring a wave offering, a burnt offering, a grain offering and a drink offering. They were told to count off seven completed weeks for convocation and it was called the Festival of Weeks. This festival is referred to in the New Testament as Pentecost.
