Celebration honors legends

BY TEVIN STINSON THE CHRONICLE

In celebration of Black History Month, more than 100 residents came together last week to honor the life and legacy of two of Forsyth County's finest, the late Maize S. Woodruff and late Walter Marshall.

During the celebration, held at Forsyth Technical Community College's Maize (FTCC) Woodruff Center on Thursday, Feb. 22, relatives of Woodruff were on

BY TODD LUCK THE CHRONICLE

The community came out to honor former school board member and County Commissioner Beaufort Bailey at a funeral service held Monday at Greater Church.

Bailey passed away on Wednesday, Feb. 22, at the age of 84. Many elected officials said he constantly offered them his advice, even after he no longer held office himself.

"He loved three things: he loved his family, he loved politics and he loved Winston-Salem State University," said State Sen. Ed Hanes, who considered Bailey a father figure in his

Bailey was born in Walnut Cove and moved to Winston-Salem at age 14, where he graduated from Atkins High School and Winston-Salem Teachers College (which is now Winston-Salem State University or WSSU).

After teaching seventh grade for 11 years, he started working at WSSU. Bailey said he ran for school board in 1972 after Wayne Corpening, a former Wachovia Bank executive who would later became mayor, suggested it, telling him that the school board needed a black voice. Bailey failed to win a seat on his first try, but two years later, he became the African-American school board candidate to win a countywide election. He lost the seat in 1978, but was re-elected to the board in 1982 and 1986.

Did Russians try to suppress the black vote?

BY CASH MICHAELS FOR THE CHRONICLE

There is no question, based on recent federal court decisions, that Republican state lawmakers, through illegal racial gerrymandering, and unconstitutional voter restriction, have attempted to suppress the African-American vote in recent high profile elections.

But thanks to major federal indictments handed down by Special Counsel Robert Mueller per his investigation into alleged Russian interference with the 2016 presidential election to ensure the election of Donald Trump, we now know Russian operatives in this country worked diligently to suppress the black vote that was expected to go to Democrat Hillary Clinton, so that her Republican opponent, Trump could win.

And there is evidence that some of those black voter suppression efforts took place right here in North Carolina - all to cripple Clinton's campaign to maximize the black vote.

indictments against 13 Russian operatives detail efforts to use everything from social media platforms like Facebook and Instagram to "create thematic group pages," which included the Black Lives Matter movement "with group names including Blacktivist."

From page 18 of the 37-page federal indict-ment, "In or around the latter half of 2016, Defendants and their co-conspirators, through their organization-controlled personas, began to encourage U.S. minority groups not to vote in the 2016 U.S. presidential election or to vote for a third-party U.S. presidential candidate [who was Jill

The indictment continued, "on or about October 16. 2016, Defendants and their co-conspirators use the organization-controlled Instagram account "Woke Blacks" to post the following message, "[A] particular hype and hatred for Trump is misleading the people and forcing Blacks to vote for Killary. We cannot resort to the lesser of two devils. Then we'd surely be better off without voting AT ALL.

The indictment then went to detail that on Nov. 3, 2016 an ad was taken out to promote a post on the Instagram account "Blackitivist" that read in part, 'Choose peace and vote for Jill stein. Trust me, it's not a
