in attendance for the press conference. He gave details of the devastation many of the churches have endured. He made an appeal for the coalition to come to their aid to help churches and schools in the eastern region of North Carolina.

"It is a blessing for us to have a group of individuals, from a city that is not even in our area, to be concerned about us," said Harris. "It gives us a breath of fresh air in knowing that people are willing to lend a helping hand and see our despair."

"Even though the flood waters have subsided, the damage is still there," he said. "The kids have not gone back to school in Onslow County. Jones and Craven County kids have been out of school for two weeks also. Two of the schools in Jones County will not reopen because of damage, so that means they will have to overcrowd other schools to accommodate the students."

Harris went on to say that all of the temporary housing in those three counties is to capacity.

Rev. Dr. Preston Harris made the trip to Winston-Salem to make an appeal for assistance to the area of the state damaged by Hurricane Florence.

Many individuals who are in need of housing are having to go outside of the area to find it.

Rev. Dr. Lamonte Williams, president of the MCWSV, is from the eastern region of the state, so when he received the call for help, he felt obliged to do so.

"We were able to connect through networking and let me say that this whole effort represents networking," said Williams. "We are thankful that there is a powerful perspective for networking and that is what allowed us to connect in the beginning."

The same coalition group recently sent nearly 40,000 bottles of water to the affected areas. According to Williams, the plan is to bring more water, along with other supplies.

Williams said the plan for the volunteers is for them to do work that does not require a permit. Their main focus is to clear away damaged items from dwellings, as well as clearing away structural damage inside of buildings.

The coalition has set up a toll-free number for people in the affected areas to call in and request assistance. There is free food, lodging and transportation for those interested in volunteering for the trip. For more information please visit loveoutloudws.com.

The Rev. Dr. James Woodson delivered the sermon Sunday afternoon at First Waughtown Baptist Church.

Waughtown, because I could not have asked for a better group of people.

"I was recently asked if I would do it all over again and as I thought about it, the only answer I could come up with was yes," he continued. "My family and I have truly been blessed during the time I have spent here."

Sunday's service was highlighted by the preaching of Rev. Dr. James Woodson II of St. James Home of Fresh Start Ministries out of Greensboro. Woodson elevated the energy level of the congregation before he even began his message. The impromptu praise and worship session lasted for nearly 20 minutes and had everyone eager to hear what Woodson had to say.

Woodson's message touched on many things dealing with the senior pastor of the church, especially when he decides to step down.

"One of the things that the church has to do is that we don't deal well with succession because we don't preach about it," said Woodson. "All of us at one point is going off the scene, but what is it that you want to transfer. Is it language or is it spirit? I contend that it is spirit."

This was Woodson's first visit to First Waughtown. He said, "The spirit and passion of the church was amazing."

"I just wanted them to join with me in celebrating an anointed pastor, whose anointing is greater than his intellect or anything else," he said. "It is spirit that drives him, so it should be spirit that drives this ministry."

Following the service, the various ministries of the church presented Bishop with special presentations and gifts. Bishop and his family then enjoyed a home-cooked meal in the basement of the church. He says it is a day he will never forget.

"When I look back over the years, it does not seem like I have been preaching for 50 years, or that I have been here for 35," said Bishop. "I know I will continue to spread the Word for as long as I live, but I am not sure how long I will continue to preach in the pulpit."
