dream and desire satisfied with confirmation and leading of the Holy Ghost. Do we or should we look forward to receiving answered prayers or long awaited desires? How do we keep the faith that the fulfillment will come?

Application: UM I states: It seems like we wait a long time to see some of God's promises in our lives. When they do arrive, it can be challenging to give back to God or accept the responsibility that comes with the promised thing. Whether a promotion, a relationship, a home, a healing, or a breakthrough, how can we make sure to give it back to God for God's glory?

The missionary group and volunteers put in countless hours to make sure the Sock Sale is a success.

said. "They tell us their stories and we just have a good time."

According to Phifer, Inmar Inc. has been one of the biggest supporters of the sock sale over the years. Forsyth Seafood and Body and Soul have also lent a helping hand to the sale as well. Phifer is thankful to those businesses that have helped spread the word, because it increases the number of people who continue to come out to the sock sale.

"There are people who come out every year and I think that part of that is for the fellowship, because honestly, how many socks can you buy?" she asked, jokingly. "There are some people who will come, then they will come back later in the day because they have told their friends, neighbors or co-workers about us."

The funds raised at the sock sale go to outreach ministries such as buying uniforms for children at a local elementary school, purchasing backpacks for kids, and bringing toiletries and supplies for children at schools, just to name a few.

"Whatever we do, we just try to give back to the community, because that is what we are supposed to do as missionaries," she said. "Our goal is to spread God's word. We want to know how we can help people and be a blessing to others."

Phifer feels it is her mission to be a blessing to others. "It makes me feel great when people come in and they smile and hold conversations," she said. "It is a great feeling to know that I am helping someone else."

Isiah Black, a sock sale patron, came out to the event with his wife to stock up on items for himself and others. "This is the greatest secret in Winston-Salem right now. I don't know how many people know about it, but they should," he said.

There will be another sock sale on Friday, Dec. 21, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at

From time of old; the yesterdays that made the tomorrows; the forgotten places of long gone houses and homes, lives, lives, days, hands, eyes, corners, streets, from walls to corners, halls of all the games with quick with of hands and feet to a time and place where now compare; where the banner is always the same, deep sleep that comes to all.

will be able to do what's needed as the senior pastor."

Armstead has enjoyed his time in the city thus far. He says the city reminds him of Richmond because of the "neighborhood feel" the city has.

"The people that I have met in the community and clergy have been very welcoming to myself and my family," he said. "The city has a very down-home feel to where you are not a stranger, you become family really quickly."

"Obviously through preaching on Sunday mornings, engaging with the congregation, as well as the ministry opportunities throughout the week, has helped me quickly build bonds with the membership and with their families," said Armstead. "I am just looking forward to a really bright future for myself and for United as a church."

Armstead said his plan going into 2019 is to reaffirm the church's mission and vision. He also would like to "build a bridge" with the younger generation in an effort to bring in more youth.
