AMERICAN WOMAN GETS A DIVORCE FROM ENGLISHMAN

London, Dec. 1.-A divorce was granted today to Mrs. Ida M. French, daughter of Robert J. Wynne of Washington, D. C., former United States consul general in London and former Postmaster General, on the grounds of infidelity and cruelty on the part of her husband, Capt. Hugh Ronald French, now of the Fourth Battalion (Territorial) of the York and Lancaster Regiment and formerly of the Seventh Dragoon Guards. Mrs. French was given the custody of the child of the marriage under an agreement to produce it in court whenever desired.

On the witness stand Mrs. French testified that her husband had beaten her on several occasions and had dragged her about the room because she refused to get up at 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning to entertain his boon companions. He had also kicked her while she was lying on a rug in front of the fire. The petitioner's sister, Mrs. Frank Austin Smith, and other witnesses corroborated the evidence. Testimony as to the infidelity of the captain was then given and the name of Marie Celeste Beach a Canadian chorus girl, was mentioned. No defense was offered and Captain French neither appeared nor was represented by counsel.

Mrs. Robert J. Wynne accompanied her daughter, Richard Westcott, United States vice consul in London, and a number of other Americans, were in court. The marriage took place in London on June 17, 1909.

Washington, Dec. 1.-White House officials today declared the United States government neither directly nor indirectly had influenced the withdrawal of the Pearson negotiations for concessions in Columbia.

CONGRESS BEGINS REGULAR SESSION WITHOUT ANY ADD

two appropriation bills that had run over from the regular session, the Newlands law for mediation and conciliation in labor disputes which averted the threatened strike of trainmen on eastern railroads last summer, abolition of the United States Commerce Court, and exemption of labor union from prosecution under the anti-trust laws.

President Wilson will read his first annual message to Congress on Tuesday, at the joint meeting of the Senate and House in the House chamber. In this address he is expected to generally outline the legislative program of both Houses for the next term. The program is generally expected to consist of supplemental anti-trust legislation as its principal item, in accordance with recommendations that will be communicated to Congress later on by President Wilson. Bills will also be passed breaking up the present system of interlocking directorates, divorcing industrial corporations from transportation lines, and laying down regulations for governmental supervision of the issuance of the securities of interstate corporations.

Numerous attempts will doubtless be made to reduce the cost of living. Scores of bills on the subject have been prepared and will be introduced in both houses during the first week of the new session. This subject is proving a very vexatious problem for the Democratic party and much attention is being directed towards it by the Republicans who claim credit for the present high scale of wages, but decline to shoulder the increased cost of living.

Other subjects which will be on the program are: Proposed government ownership of telegraph and telephone lines, women's suffrage, rural credits, conservation, vocational education, government ownership of Alaskan railroads, right of members of Congress to serve on political committees that solicit campaign contributions, the Panama Canal, the proposal of England that the powers shall cease naval construction for a year, workmen's compensation, extension of the parcels post system and good roads.
