Celebration Rained Out Ellabehnton, Tenn., Oct. 7.—The celebration of the founding of the Whig association and the Battle of King's Mountain, was completely rained out this afternoon after the program had gotten under way. One of the most terrific rain and hail storms in years came down on the North Carolina hills just as the Pageant of Freedom was started with the Indian dance. Massachusetts looms last year produced enough to make a blanket one mile long and 35 miles wide.

Cowardice Constantine Brought Eastern Crisis

Former Aid to the King of Greece Claims That Ruler Was Afraid to Tell the People the Whole Truth.

London, Oct. 7.—"The present Near East tragedy is the sole result of Constantine's grandiose dreams and subject cowardice."

Thus did Major George Melas, Greek aristocrat and author, who was the king's private secretary until 1915, put the blame for the present trouble on the foolish ambitions of a weak monarch.

Major Melas knows Constantine well. They were intimate friends since childhood. But they severed their political ties when Melas joined the Venizelos legions that fought for the allies.

In an exclusive interview with NEA Service, Major Melas said: "Encouraged by the allies, Constantine dreamed of a vast Greek empire."

"His cowardice was displayed when he refused to recognize the impossibility of conquering Asia Minor and refused to withdraw the army and tell the Greeks the whole truth."

"The exking once told me that he realized that some day he would be dethroned by the people. But before that occurred he said that he would put the country to fire and blood."

"Greece is ruined for more than a generation. The splendid Hellenism of Asia Minor is destroyed forever."

"Constantine, not only arrogant and obstinate, was obsessed with a desire to be absolute ruler having his say regardless of the consequences."

"I predicted that he would soon be dethroned and that his pro-German son Prince George would succeed."

There was no chance of any of Constantine's brothers getting the throne, least of all, Prince Christopher, known throughout all Greece as stupid.

"American dollars and his wife, the former Mrs. Leeds, have beguiled him in the eyes of the Greeks."

Vamp Joins Ranks Of The Salvation Army

Captain Rhea Crawford is Called the Vamp of the Salvation Army By the Novelty Seekers Around Times Square.

New York, Oct. 7.—A new queen reigns on Broadway! Her name is Rhea Crawford, the "Vamp of the Salvation Army" they call her around Times Square.

When a man laughs, or looks skeptical, I single him out for special attention. Just as a vaudeville performer sometimes does. Do you remember what you were when you left your smaller town home to capture the big city? I ask him. "What do you really think of what you've become?"

"I keep after him until he does think, and everyone else thinks. Give Her Audience Jazzy Hymns "Broadway loves its jazz, so I jazz up the hymns a little."

"I keep constantly in motion. Eva Tangany doesn't use more pep in a performance than I do."

The captain was asked if she received notes from men in her audience. She laughed, and admitted she did.

"I get a sheaf of letters every day," she said. "Most of them from men. I get more invitations to dinner in a week than I could accept in a year."

"But I accept nothing. I make it a point to know my audience personally. But I never offend those who extend invitations. I simply tell them all I'm too busy. I am."

Captain Crawford meets the Broadway beauties on their own ground. She has Irish-blue eyes, a creamy skin, red-gold hair, ankles that Ziegfeld himself couldn't criticize and lines of such slender loveliness you are ready to count your calories the rest of your life.

"To stay on Broadway, you must be a good showman," she continued knowingly. "You must have a big thing in your eye. You must give them your best, and let them know you are giving it."

"I have no moving picture outfit, but I can make the men and women in my audience see pictures no camera could show when I remind them of their homes and mothers and their childhood associations."

"I conquered Broadway because I have the soul of Broadway myself," she said, "and its mind and heart as well. I love Broadway and understand it. It is the biggest street in the world and has the biggest heart."

WINSTON-SALEM DAY IN YADKIN

Many Citizens Will Journey to East Bend for Neighborly Visit

TO CONVEY GREETINGS

Start From Robert E. Lee Thursday, 2 p. m.

Thursday, October 12, will be Winston-Salem day at the Yadkin County Fair at East Bend, and a large number of citizens of the Twin City will journey to this prosperous town of Forsyth's neighboring county and convey the greetings and good wishes of the population of the Twin-City.

This will be the fourth visit to be made by Winston-Salem delegations to county fairs. Interest in the trip to East Bend next Thursday is very general because of the nearness of the fair to be visited, and it is expected that quite a large crowd will make the trip next Thursday.

The starting time will be 2 p. m. from the Robert E. Lee. A general invitation is extended to the citizenship to go along. All that will be necessary will be to report at the Robert E. Lee next Thursday, preferably with a car, but the committee announces that those without transportation will be provided for.

The fair management has provided for a short program of welcome in behalf of the Twin City and responses will be made by members of the Winston-Salem delegation.

Other fairs that will be visited later on are: The Sandhill Fair at Pinehurst, the Stokes County Fair at King, and the Henry County Fair at Martinsville.

Clemenceau Has Become Reminiscent Recently

Recounts His Experience When, As a Young Man, He Landed in New York and Sought Employment.

(By The Associated Press) Paris, Oct. 7.—Former Premier Clemenceau has become reminiscent since he decided to visit next November. Clemenceau was 35 years old when, as a young doctor, he landed in New York 56 years ago, and found employment as a Librarian, a position he held for two years. The grizzled old "Tiger" says these two years were among the happiest of his long life.

The reading public didn't patronize the library much in those days. Clemenceau said, therefore he was able to seclude himself among the books and spent most of his time reading the best philosophy and historians. "There is no mind acquired what it lacked and my intellect completed its formation," he said recently.

It was after this that he became professor of French in a school for young ladies at Stamford, Conn. A school mistress, who was a practical soul, learned that he was an accomplished horseman, therefore she requested him to accompany the girls on their rides across the country. It was thus that Clemenceau fell in love with Mary Plummer, of Boston, whom he afterward married. She is the mother of his three children. Clemenceau returned to France in 1849, and a year later came to the Franco-Prussian war. As Mayor of Montmartre, Clemenceau began his political career which has lasted for upwards of 50 years.

Even the people who build castles in the air ought to live up to them. One man's point of view is as good as another's till you try to sit on it. Truth may be stranger than fiction, but a lie is apt to travel faster.

A jellyfish weighing more than 56 pounds and measuring three feet across, was recently hauled ashore on the beach at Portsmouth, England.

ALWAYS PREFERRED PEPSI-COLA—there's a reason. Come to the First Baptist church Sunday night and hear Dr. Jester's closing message on "The Touch That Saves." Wonderful singing, powerful preaching; a blessing for all who can get in. Early comers get the best seats; late comers may not get in.
