SELLER DIRECTOR STATE CHAMBER

Executive Board Trade Officers; N. C. Chamber of Commerce Launched

W. H. Eller, Trust Officer of the State Bank and Trust Company, Director of the Winston-Salem Chamber of Trade, was elected a member of the temporary board of directors of the North Carolina State Chamber of Commerce at the organizational meeting held at Wrightsville on Wednesday. Raleigh was the temporary headquarters.

President R. G. Stockton, of the Board of Trade, Mr. Eller and Mr. Ritter attended the meeting at Wrightsville Beach and returned to Winston-Salem Thursday.

According to Secretary Ritter the Chamber was launched under the auspices. There were a number of representatives of the North Carolina communities and not only did enthusiasm prevail but each one present endeavored to back the movement to the best of his ability and resources. The directors, representative of the entire state, were elected and the annual meeting of the state will be held. The directors will be called together soon for the election of a president and officers, and a preliminary program of work will be mapped out.

Membership of the state chamber as is proposed under the plan that was adopted, will be up of commercial, trade and organizations of the state who will be according to their ability and income. Provision will be made for associate members and shortly an energetic program will be launched to make the state body one of the most representative in the country.

Some of the features of the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce, which is regarded as one of the most effective organizations of its kind in the country, are embodied in the constitution of the North Carolina body. The Pennsylvania organization has been doing some effective work in the way of exploiting that state and promoting legislation that has permitted commerce and industry to progress along the lines of least resistance.

Dan Holland, secretary of the Fayetteville Chamber of Commerce, which organization took a leading part in organizing the state chamber, was elected a member of the board of directors and will undertake the preliminary work of getting the directors to function. President Stockton and Mr. Eller served as members of the organization and constitution committee and both took a leading part in directing the work of putting the movement across. President Stockton was a member of the nominating committee also.

of such service and added: "The government might well stamp railway employment with the sanctity of public service and guarantee to the railway employees that justice which voices the American conception of righteousness on the one hand and assures continuity of service on the other."

and law enforcement he said: "People ever will differ about the wisdom of the enactment of a law—there is divided opinion regarding the eighteenth amendment and the laws enacted to make it operative—but there can be no difference of opinion about honest law enforcement."

"It is not difficult, Chairman Lodge, to make ourselves clear on the question of international relationship. We Republicans of the senate, conscious of our solemn oaths and mindful of our constitutional obligations, when we saw the structure of a world super-government taking visionary form, joined in a becoming warning of our devotion to this republic. If the torch of constitutionalism had not been dimmed, the delayed part of disappointment and Europe's misunderstanding of America easily might have been avoided. The Republicans of the senate halted the barter of independent American eminence and influence, which it was proposed to exchange for an obscure and unequal place in the merged government of the world. Our party means to hold the heritage of American nationality unimpaired and unswerving."

"The world will not misconstrue. We do not mean to hold aloof. We do not mean to shun a single responsibility of this republic to world civilization. There is no hate in the American heart. We have no envy, no suspicion, no aversion for any people in the world. We held to our rights, and means to defend, and we mean to sustain the rights of this nation and our citizens alike, everywhere under the shining sun. Yet there is the concord of amity and sympathy and fraternity in every resolution. There is a genuine aspiration in every American breast for a tranquil friendship with all the world.

"More, we believe the unspeakable sorrows, the immeasurable sacrifices, the awakened convictions and the aspiring conscience of human kind must commit the nations of the earth to a new and better relationship. It need not be discussed now what motives plunged the world into war, it need not be inquired whether we asked the sons of this republic to defend our national rights, as I believe we did, or to purge the old world of the accumulated ill of rivalry and greed, the sacrifices will be in vain if we cannot acclaim a new order, with added security to civilization and peace maintained."

"One may readily sense the conscience of our America. I am sure I understand the purpose of the dominant group of the senate. We were not seeking to defeat a world aspiration, we were resolved to safeguard America. We were resolved then, even as we are today, and will be tomorrow, to preserve this free and independent republic. Let those now responsible, or seeking responsibility, propose the surrender, whether with interpretations, apologies or reluctant reservations—from which our rights are to be omitted—we welcome the referendum to the American people on the preservation of America, and the Republicans party pledge its defense of the preserved inheritance of national freedom."

"In the call of the conscience of America is peace, peace that closes the gaping wound of world war, and silences the impassioned voices of international envy and distrust. Heeding this call and knowing as I do the disposition of the congress, I promise you formal and effective peace so quickly as a Republican congress can pass its declaration for a Republican executive to sign. Then we may turn to our readjustment at home and proceed deliberately and reflectively to that hoped-for world relationship which shall satisfy both conscience and aspirations, and still hold us free from menacing involvement."

"I can hear in the call of conscience an insistent voice for the largely reduced armaments throughout the world, with attending reduction of burdens upon peace-loving humanity. We wish to give of American influence and example; we must give of American leadership to that invaluable accomplishment. I can speak unreservedly of the American aspiration and the Republican commitment for an association of nations, co-operating in sublime accord, to attain and preserve peace thru justice rather than force, determined to add to security thru international law, so clarified that no misconception can be possible without affronting world honor."

"This republic can never be unmindful of its power, and must never forget the force of its example. Possessor of might that admits no fear, America must stand foremost for the right. If the mistaken voice of America, spoken in unbecoming haste, led Europe, in the hour of deepest anxiety, into a military alliance which menaces peace and threatens all freedom, instead of adding to their security, then we must speak the truth for America and express our hope for the fraternized conscience of nations.

"It will avail nothing to discuss in detail the league covenant, which was conceived for world super-government, negotiated in misapprehension, and intemperately urged and demanded by its administration sponsors, who related every effort to safeguard America, and who finally objected when such safeguards were inserted. If the supreme blunder has left European relationships inextricably interwoven in the league compact, our sympathy for Europe only magnifies our own good fortune in resisting involvement. It is better to be the free and disinterested agent of international justice and advancing civilization, with the covenant of conscience, than to be shackled by a written compact which surrenders our freedom of action and gives to a military alliance the right to proclaim America's duty to the world. No surrender of rights to a world council or its military alliance, no assumed mandatory however appealing, ever shall summon the sons of this republic to war. Their supreme sacrifice shall only be asked for America and its call of honor. There is a sanctity in that right we will not delegate."

"When the compact was being written, I do not know whether Europe asked or ambition insistently bestowed. It was so good to rejoice in the world's confidence in our unselfishness that I can believe our evident disinterestedness inspired Europe's wish for our association, quite as much as the selfish thought of enlisting American power and resources. Ours is an outstanding, influential example to the world, whether we cloak it in spoken modesty or magnify it in exaltation. We want to help; we mean to help; but we hold to our own interpretation of the American conscience as the very soul of our nationality.

"Disposed as we are, the way is very simple. Let the failure attending assumption, obstinacy, impracticability and delay be recognized, and let us find the big, practical, unselfish way to do our part, neither covetous because of ambition nor hesitant thru fear, but ready to serve ourselves, humanity and God. With a senate advising as the constitution contemplates, I would hopefully approach the nations of Europe and of the earth, proposing that understanding which makes us a willing participant in the conscription of nations to a new relationship, to commit the moral forces of the world, America included, to peace and international justice, still leaving America free, independent and self-reliant, but offering friendship to all the world.

"If men call for more specific details, I remind them that moral commitments are broad and all inclusive, and we are contemplating peoples in the concord of humanity's advancement. From our own viewpoint the program is specifically American, and we mean to be Americans first, to all the world."
