FOREIGN.

FROM THE N. Y. JOURNAL OF COMMERCE.

By the packet ship Orpheus, Capt. Cobb, we have received London papers to Sept. 15th, and Liverpool to the 16th, both inclusive.

London, Sept. 12.

A new turn has, it is said, been given to the speculative operations of the foreign market, through the employment of pigeons, by which the Paris prices of the day preceding have been regularly obtained when any fluctuation has occurred before the close of business in this market. The same thing is said to have been done in Paris with respect to the London prices.

Accounts from Stockholm state that the cholera spread throughout the greatest part of Sweden. In the capital alone 197 persons had been attacked, of whom 77 died.

The new Turkish Ambassador had arrived in Strasburg on his way to Paris. The affairs of the East are beginning once more to draw attention to the French capital. It is evident that both the Ambassador to France and the one coming to this country are entrusted with missions of more vital importance to the Ottoman empire than the mere restitution of Algiers, the possession of which had long ceased to be of any benefit to the SULTAN under the DEY.

FROM FRANCE.

By the packet ship Havre, Capt. Stoddard, we have received Havre papers to Sept. 10th, and Paris to the evening of the 9th. The Mariposa brings London papers to the 11th.

The news from Spain continues favorable to the Queen. Don Carlos' army is rapidly falling to pieces.

On the 6th September, the Committee of the holders of Spanish Rentes, went to St. Cloud, to deliver to the King the petition agreed upon by that body, in the following terms:

"SIRE!—Twenty thousand French families having an interest in the Spanish Funds, reduced to despair by the ruin with which they are threatened, come with confidence to lay their situation and wishes before your Majesty. The law of honor which governs individuals ought to be the rule of states also. A government has no more right than the most obscure individual to fail in observance of it. How then can it be conceived that in the earliest days of a new Government while in peace, and surrounded by the wealth of Europe offered to its necessities, its Ministers venture to propose a national bankruptcy? Of whom is it the enemy—of the foreigners whom it despoils, or the nation which it wishes to dishonor? If Spain believes that she has grounds of complaint against the primary agents of these financial operations, let her direct her attacks against them! The tribunals will do justice upon them. Because one has been deceived, has one thereby a right to deceive others? Sire—when you published the Quadruple Treaty, we imagined that it amounted to a consolidation of our rights, and the more so, as we thought that thereby Spain might henceforth enter with security upon that Constitutional system of Government, the good faith of which constitutes its power. Who then could foresee that a Government allied to France, would take upon itself the task of injuring Frenchmen!—Sire! Be our refuge and our defence!—Your support alone can save us from a frightful disaster. We implore it as an act of grace,—we shall receive it as an act of benevolence. We are with the most profound respect, Sire, your Majesty's most humble, obedient, and faithful servants." (Here follow 3,000 signatures.)

In presenting this petition, Mr. Canteux, on behalf of the Committee, made a short address to the King, who in reply expressed his hope that the plan of the Spanish Minister (Toreno) would be modified, and stated that his Majesty's Ambassador had made some energetic representations on the subject, in which he was seconded by the British Ambassador.

Marshal Gerard has prescribed the restitution to the Budget of the funds allowed for works on the fortifications, for the present year, which should not have been undertaken, and are not of absolute necessity.—Messenger.

A most violent storm from the south-west visited Padua on the 27th ult. The hailstones were of a size beyond any in the recollection of the oldest inhabitants, and in less than half an hour the town and the whole of the surrounding country was one scene of devastation.

The Astronomer Harding, who discovered the planet Juno, died at Gottingen on the 31st Aug.

The Turkish Court Journal, which had been suspended for several months, has again appeared. The number of the 2d of August contains particulars of the capture and execution of Kedri, one of the Legistan rebels.

TURKEY AND EGYPT.

Accounts from Constantinople, of the 15th ult. confirm the news that Ibrahim Pacha has obtained great advantages over the Syrian insurgents. They moreover state that "other victories have been gained by the Egyptian troops, which must speedily put an end to the insurrectionary spirit of the revolted districts, and will effect a complete change in the painful situation of Ibrahim. The Ottoman Porte still preserves the greatest silence on the subject. Mehemed Ali, who hastened to the succor of his son with a powerful force, appears to have contributed principally to the defeat which the insurgents sustained in the latter part of July. It appears this last victory was decisive, for the insurgents delivered themselves up to the clemency of the victor, and laid down their arms; some detachments, however escaped into Libanus. The Sultan seemed petrified with this unexpected result. The downcast looks of certain inmates of the Seraglio sufficiently proclaimed their disappointment. The armaments of the arsenal have been discontinued.—The greater number of the troops who were concentrated on the other side of the canal will return to their garrisons, or will be discharged. The warlike ardor of the Sultan has entirely subsided, and he doubtless feels that the foreign diplomatists were right in advising him not to meddle with the Syrian affair. All will now go on as formerly, as soon as Mehemed Ali is re-embarked, and when the Sultan finds himself at leisure to attend to his administrative reforms. It is deserving of notice that Turkish Ambassadors are on their routes to Paris and London."

FROM THE N. Y. GAZETTE.

We have been favored with the perusal of a circular, lately issued by Messrs. Ingham, Stephens & Co. of Marsala, in the Island of Sicily, relative to Sicily Madeira Wines generally, (and particularly in regard to their own the "Ingham" brand,) an abstract from which we think will not be considered by our readers without interest, as these wines are now deservedly getting into great use, throughout the United States.

Marsala, 30th June, 1834.

"There is no country in the world that is more genial to the growth of the vine, and the production of wines, than the Island of Sicily. It is nearly in the same latitude as Madeira, and those parts of Spain which produce the best and most highly esteemed wines; and if it be true, as is generally admitted, that a volcanic soil and beautifully uniform climate, are necessary to produce rich and full bodied wines, free from acidity, there can be no doubt that Sicily is favored by nature, in these respects, in a most pre-eminent degree.

With a knowledge of those natural advantages, our exertions from the commencement of our establishment at Marsala in the year 1812, have been constantly directed to the selection of the best wines, produced in the Island, and so to improve their quality, as to meet the taste of consumers in England and America; and if the testimony of our friends and the greatly increased, and increasing demand for our wines, not only in Great Britain but also in the United States, to say nothing of other countries, be a criterion whereby to form a correct judgment, we hope we may without hesitation conclude, that we have pretty well succeeded in our object."

Biting off the nose to spite the face.—We once heard of a man's marrying to be revenged. Having been refused by the lady to whom he had offered his hand, he renewed the suit until she at last consented, and they were married. After the ceremony was over, he slipped a note into the hands of the bride, and left the house. It ran thus: "Madam, you would not be mine—now I will not be yours; neither can you be the wife of another while I live. I am revenged." The best of the story is that the self-banished bridegroom forgot to make his will, and in less than a month after, being killed by a fall from his horse, his deserted wife, according to law, inherited a large portion of his very handsome property.

Camden Journal.

The American traitor, Arnold.—During the American traitor Arnold's predatory operations in Virginia, in 1781, he took an American captain prisoner. After some general conversation, he asked the captain "What he thought the Americans would do with him if they caught him?" The captain declined at first giving him an answer; but upon being repeatedly urged, he said, "Why, sir, if I must answer your question, you must excuse my telling you the truth, if my countrymen should catch you, I believe they would first cut off your lame leg, which was wounded in the cause of freedom and virtue at Quebec, and bury it with the honors of war, and afterwards hang the remainder of your body on a gibbet."
