FROM THE CHARLESTON COURIER:
THE AERONAUT'S RETURN.
We have the satisfaction of announcing to our readers the safe return of Mr. Elliott, after an excursion of curious and perilous adventures. The following is a hasty narrative of his aerial voyage, taken at a late hour from his own lips.

At a quarter past 3 o'clock, P. M. bore away from his moorings with a North Easterly breeze, in a South Westerly direction, crossing Ashley and Stono Rivers, James and John's Island, and landing at the plantation of Hugh Wilson, Esq. on Wadmaw Island, about 20 miles from Charleston. Passed over several plantations, and spoke the inhabitants with his speaking trumpet, and at one of them, being as low as 600 feet from the earth, was answered so as to be distinctly heard by Dr. Curtis. The greatest altitude attained, was two miles and a half between James and John's Island. The greatest alarm and commotion was produced among the negroes, at the different settlements on the route, at the passage of the Balloon and its living navigator, through the Heavens—wherever it approached they scattered away in great consternation—some of them crying out that it was a bird (rara avis), others that it was an angel, and at one plantation, where a negro had just died, they insisted that it was his Satanic majesty himself come to fly away with the deceased. While passing one plantation, he lowered a cord within a few feet of a negro, and called on him to lay hold of it, but the fellow after gazing awhile irresolute, took to his heels with great rapidity. After proceeding some distance, cast anchor at a large pine tree, in the neighborhood of a swamp, near which there was an open field suitable for a descent, but the current of wind was so strong that the top of the tree gave way, and the anchor came in contact with a large gum tree that stood next in place; there attempted to haul himself down by his cable, 300 feet in length; but a flaw of wind striking the Balloon with great violence, the cable broke loose from the ear, tearing off a part of it, and he was deprived of the use of his anchor in a heavy wind. As soon as the Balloon was disengaged from the anchor and cable, weighing 15 lbs. its motive power was so much increased, that it rose at once half a mile in a perpendicular direction, the ear leaning so much on one side, that his ballast, and a bottle of wine and his hat were thrown out. Was then carried immediately over the house on Mr. Wilson's place, and over a large field of cleared land, where he again contemplated a descent. As he passed the house, about a half a mile over head, spoke the inmates, and found the whites ready to assist him, but the negroes too much frightened to indicate any such disposition. The valve being in perfect order, opened it to descend, but going at the rate of not less than 40 miles an hour, came in contact with a grove of pine trees, through which he was dragged for about three quarters a mile, the Balloon sometimes floating above the trees, and at others getting entangled among their tops, and the car dashing against trees and breaking off limbs, and at times touching the ground, and rebounding to a great height. When in this situation he was reminded of a similar adventure of Mr. Mills, a brother Aeronaut, who was dragged through a forest of pines in New Jersey, on which occasion he lost his Balloon. After being thus dragged through the woods, found the gas so much diminished in quantity that the Balloon was no longer disposed to ascend; and he remained stationary in his car, awaiting assistance, with the valves open and the gas escaping. Mr. Chaplin then came to his assistance on horseback, followed by about 40 negroes. The negroes, however, were very loth to approach, and stood peeping at him from behind the pine trees, and it was not until they were repeatedly ordered by Mr. Chaplin, that they could be induced to lend a helping hand, and then they did so with fear and trembling—their eyes fixed on the Aeronaut in terrified amazement—some asking if it was true that he was a living man, and all regarding him as a supernatural monster. Mr. J. D. McKendree next came up, and also Dr. Thos. Curtis, who united with Mr. Chaplin in rendering all the aid and kind offices that the occasion required. The Balloon, with their polite and seasonable aid, was finally nearly folded up, with no other damage, than a small rent, not more than an inch square, occasioned by being torn by the underwood, when he had every reason to expect that it would have been torn to pieces among the pines—and he himself escaped with only a slight bruise—Missed his flags and on searching for them, found the Star Spangled Banner, unfurled and waving in the top of a pine tree, as if it had been placed there by design; and the tri-colored Flag also waving at half-mast in another pine near by.

Was then escorted by Mr. Chaplin and the other gentlemen to the house of the first named, where all joined in paying him the kindest and most hospitable attentions.

After partaking of bountiful refreshments, retired to a comfortable night's rest, and the next morning, having breakfasted with Mr. Chaplin, was taken by him in a gig, Mr. J. P. TURNBULL, accompanying on horse, to Mr. ANGEL'S, whence a boat was expected to leave for the city. The boat not being there, was hospitably entertained at dinner by Mr.
ANGEL and the boat having arrived late in the afternoon she was immediately manned with six of the primest oarsmen on the place, and he embarked, Mr. AN-GEL politely accompanying him, for the city, where he arrived at a quarter past 8 o'- clock, P. M.; the negroes all the way singing a song about "Massa ELLIOTT and his Balloon," which they had composed ex tempore for the occasion.

The whole time occupied by the ascension was but 45 minutes, during which period 20 miles were traversed; and in one hour after he ascended the gas was discharged and the Balloon folded up—Mr. E. has enjoyed upon us to express his grateful sense of the kindness of the several gentlemen who assisted, and entertained him, and requested us to say although he has travelled much, he can declare with truth, that he has found the warm hearted sons of South Carolina, unequaled in hospitality. He bids them adieu with gratitude that time can never efface or impair.

FROM THE NEW YORK EVENING POST.
ARISTOCRACY AMONG WOMEN.

A great many persons seem to think that what is said about "Aristocracy" in this country, is totally destitute of real foundation, and intended only for political effect. But if they would look a little into the state of our female society and compare it with the most Aristocratical forms of female society in Europe, they would find the points of difference so slight that it would be hard to designate them. Such an examination is the most correct method of ascertaining the truth on this subject; because, among working women there cannot be any candidates for the Legislature selected to promote the designs of an aspiring money party, nor would the sinister views of that party be in any way promoted by the same feigned spirit of liberality towards them, which characterizes their political dealings with working men. Hence the line of demarkation between plebeians and patricians has been more distinctly drawn in female society, than among men; so that while aspirants to office are making false pretensions to the character of working men for political effect, their wives and daughters would be considered as degraded by familiar and social intercourse with working women. This is so, glaringly apparent in society that no argument is necessary to substantiate it; but the evils resulting from it, though of immense magnitude, are almost wholly overlooked by those who are most seriously affected by it.

It has led women to place an improper estimate upon a life of luxurious ease, and to regard, with an undue degree of deference, the privileges of wealthy associations.

It makes the poor among them ashamed of their poverty or dependence upon their industry for support.

It leads them to extravagance in dress and furniture, as the only means of keeping up their respectability.

It thus robs their virtue of its reward and their industry of its recompense, and leaves them hopelessly exposed to all the evil of poverty and imaginary degradation.

In short it reduces a large portion of the female community, to that state of imbecile servility which is characteristic of a peasantry, under the most arbitrary reign of privileged classes, in despotic countries.

These incontrovertible truths establish the fact beyond all dispute, that a spirit of aristocracy is prevalent among women to an alarming extent. But for the disguise which it is compelled to wear among men, under our republican government, it would be equally apparent among them. It therefore becomes all good citizens who regard our liberties as worth preserving, to look about for a remedy to evils of which there is so much ground for complaint, and the present aspect of our political parties should not pass unheeded. Let it be borne in mind that our venerable President was called from his retirement by the poor, and elevated to his present station by their unbought suffrages.

"A Thing—Temperance has heretofore been called a "sectarian thing"— and this charge, although nearly obsolete, is truer than it ever was. It may now be called a "sectarian thing" in good earnest; for sects unite in it. It is a Congregational thing, a Presbyterian thing, a Baptist thing, a Unitarian thing, an Episcopal thing, a Quaker thing, a Sher-ker thing, an Universalist thing, and will be a universal thing."

Henrietta, were arrested at the instance of Doyle O'Hanlon, for a trespass ex artibus by taking two cords of Wood from E. B. Dudley's Wood Yard, and whereas, the said Capt. Taws and others were acting under the directions of the Henrietta Steam Boat Company, and for whose acts and doings the said Company is responsible: And whereas, further, I have been assured by the Agent delivering Wood at said Landing, that the said Company has the privilege of taking it at all times, which to Capt. Taws was made known, — I, therefore, do publicly call upon all Gentlemen supplying Wood at the said Landing to give me either a written notice, or to notify me through the public Press, of their assent or dissent to the said Henrietta Steam Boat Company taking Wood at said Landing in future. And should any one at said Landing be disposed to make a contract exclusively with said Company, to deliver Pine or Light Wood at said Landing, cash shall at all times be paid to any responsible person on delivery.

$100 Reward.

WILL be given to the apprehension of my Mislaid Man JO: (known in Wilmington as JO: GRANGE) or for such information as will lead to my recovery of him. He is some 25 years old; rather robustly made; stoops considerably when in motion; has something of a limp in his gait, (the natural defect) is about five feet seven inches high, when addressed speaks slowly and imperially. He has a full set of hair; gray eyes; an unusual number of wrinkles about the angles of his mouth, and his teeth much discolored from the use of Tobacco. He has a scar upon his breast, occasioned either by a burn or a blister—his chest very hairy. He has also a strange peculiarity about his feet, viz. the two toes next adjoining the great one, on each foot, are connected together, one half their length, or to the middle joint of each. He is two thirds white, and wears cleanly dressed, "night pass" for a white man.

If he expecter he has taken shipping for the north, and if so, I will further give $100 for such evidence as may convict the person or persons concerned in his abduction.
He left this between the 21st and 30th ult.
