MISCELLANY.

A correspondent of a Southern paper speaks in the following terms of the Pub lic School system of New-England-of which, above all her admirable institutions, her people have just cause to be

"The school houses of New England have been called the fortresses of New England. You see them in the country every two miles or less, on almost every important road-and every body knows or ought to know that New England is cut up with roads-half roads-I was going to say. These Free Schools, where the poor are educated at the expense of the rich, I verily believe, give that peculiarity of which I have spoken, to the whole Yankee nation. They arouse and stimulate whatever of intellect there is in a man. They foster enterprize and emulation. They educate to a certain extent all the people. Hence New England men have the benefit that education always gives-the ardent thirst for knowledge and for intellectnal and moral achievement: -They aim high and reach high. Work, they must or starve, for the soil is not the bountiful giver of the fruits of a soil under a Southern sun,the climate is cold,-the summers are short,-and then comes growling November, and fiercely raging winter, with its ice and its storms, so that one man then eats up from October to, May what may be gathered the rest of the time .-Thus necessity demands the exercise of FLANNELS, all colors - Shoes and faculty, and our free schools teach all

In the large towns and cities, every The poorest boy in the free school feels vigor, variety, and originality: richest. "You do not mean," said Gov. Barbour of Virginia, after visiting the superb schools of Boston, which he admired very much "that these schools are free!" "Indeed I do," said the school committee man. "You remember the boy that got the medal in the class we have just examined, and the boy that lost it! the first is the son of that wood-sawyer there (pointing to a man who was sawing wood in the street,) and the second is the son of John Quincy Adams, the President of the United States."-The Virginian stared in astonishment at a spectarle like this, and no longer wondered at the prosperity of New England WHITE & Brown Sugar-Molasses, But the other day I was at the school dinner in Boston-a dinner given to the Hyson Skin TEAS-Coffee-Load and boys who have won the medals for supe-Lump Sugar-White and Brown Loaf. rior scholarship-and a long table, extending the whole length of Fanueil Hall, was filled up with-as bright and spirited boys as can be found on the face 80 Kegs Powder, 100 Bass Shor, of the earth—two thirds of whom, I was sed them, and toasted them as 'the jewels of Boston.' Old Fanueil Hall rang with thunders of applause. The Lieut, Governor of the Commonwealth boastee The tables were filled with distinguished Men, educated in the same manner, among whom was DANIEL WEESTER, the boy of a free school and schoolmaster himself. The stimulus these boys then received they will never forget to the day of their death. It is an era in their lives-it is an impulse which will move

> At this season of the year, the acadenies are crowded with young men fitting themselves to keep school. A months study makes an instructor of a man! And the business of school keep ing is so pleasant, that many rush into it. The school master in New England is the great man of his district all look up to him-all attend to him-kindness ex hausts its efforts upon him. SCOTT'S HABITS OF COMPOSITION -Sir Walter composed with great facility, and was so borne or hurried along that his brain resembled a high pressure engine, the steam of which was perpetually up every time he entered his study and lifted a pen.- Lauerly he dictated, and we have heard his amanuensis say that he paced the apartment under great emotion, and appeared more like a rapt seer than an ordinary mortal while composing the celebrated dialogue between the Templar and the fair Rebecca. Mr. William Laidlaw is himself a man of genius, feeling and taste : such was the effect upon his own nerves that he frequently paused and placed his hands on his temples from

There are authors, as there are painters, whose forte resides in the bold offhand sivle of composition, and who produce by breath of outline and touch what others supply by laborious, minute, and finished execution. If the works of one look best at a distance, and are injured by being held too closely to the eye, those of the other rise, in our estimation, the nearer we approach thein, and amply rel pay the most leisurely and microscopic examination. Sir Walter went to work like Sir Henry Rackburn, and exercised the same witchery in the management of words that his cotemporary did in lights and shadows. Washington Irving to take only one example is a painter of quite a different cast; every thing with him is thing is done that can be done to stimu- delicate and studied, and in giving the fare and arouse the body. BURNING OF A CONVENT IN SPAIN -The magnificent convent of Aranguza contained 100 friars, and was the focus of revolt in the Carlist provinces. It was filled with all the necessaries and luxuries of life, and the boly monks, who professed self-denial and poverty, wallowed in idleness and luxury. The Carlist councils of war were held there, large maguzines of arms and powder were formed within the walls, and some of the monks had joined the Carlist army. The Convent was situated in the centre of a rocky mountain, and presented a most pictal resque appearance. The apartments of the monks were elegant. On the night of the seventeenth of August last, Gen. Rodil, who commanded the queen's forces, sent a party of troops to set fire to this massy edifice. They ordered out the friars, who marched off, bearing on their shoulders a statue of the virgin Mary -The soldiers then broke the altars in pieces and formed piles of wood in different parts of the edifice, and in a few minutes the whole convent was in a blaze. The night was dark, and the glare of the flames, illuminating the mountains and woods, for many leagues around, presented a grand and terrific spectacle. The soldiers sat around the immense bonfire, drinking the wine of the monks. The most horrid part of the story remains to be told; it makes one almost sorry that the soldiers did not burn up the cruel, rascally monks in the flames of their convent. Before they set fire to the building, they found a subterranean dunthey will never be false to themselves nor geon, with a massy iron door, they perceived by the light of a lantern a human being lying on the ground, of whom the following account is given in a letter from Spain, published in the London Sun :

"He was chained to a ring fastened in the wall, and was reduced to a mere skeleton, his heard reached to his waist, he was naked, and the bones nearly protru ded through his skin. A pitcher of wahim. On bearing the door open, he raised his head, and exclaimed, "Thank God; your have at fast come to put an end to my sufferings," imagining that the monks had come to notify his execution - When asked who and what he was, he informed the officers of the queen's troops, that he had been 11 years immured in that dungeon, that his food had been, the whole of that time a scanty supply of bread and water, that he trad frequently been scourged by the monks to extort confessions of crimes which he never committed. His only crime was that of being a liberal, during the constitutional system. When told be was at liberty, he became like a madman He could not bear the light of day, and fresh air had such an effect on him that he swooped away."
