Brunswick, known by the name of Walden, situated near the sea shore, about forty miles from Wilmington, on the Georgetown (S. C.) main road, and seven miles from the State line, containing 1500 acres, or more, 3- to 400 acres of which is in high swamp, and well adapted to the culture of Cotton, Corn, Oats, Peas, or any thing else. This land is so situated, that the water which falls upon it, runs off in opposite directions, emptying itself into Little River on the West, and Shallotte River on the East, which prevents its ever being inundated by freshets. About 25 or 30 acres is now under cultivation, and will produce as much, for what I know, as any land in the State. The ballance is well covered with White and other Oaks, Black and Sweet Gum, Ash, Poplars, Swamp Palmetto, &c. &c. The residue of the tract is of Hammock and Pine land. calculated for Timber, Turpentine, Tar, &c. The range for Cattle is excellent, having the benefit of a large salt marsh, and the Hog range not to be beaten. Fish and Oysters of the best kind, are to be obtained within one and a half miles of the settlement, in great abundance. The advatanges of Shallotte and Little Rivers are very great, when vessels of considerable size can approach within five to seven miles of the settlement, and carry produce to any market. ### Poetry.

SHE IS THINE -It will be remembered that an extraordinary excitement was created some time since, in the most fashionable circles, by the secret marriage of a lady, equally celebrated for her wealth, beauty and accomplishments, to the younger branch of a family more illustrious for its talents than remarkable for any other posses. the father of the lady, a variety of circumstances prompted the demand of that kind of satisfaction which an exchange of pistol balls is supposed to the ladies, whose honor was supposed to be implicated by the transaction; "a meeting" took dace, happily without sert -s consequences. A considerable time elapsed before a reconciliation took place between the _arties; and that event was, we believe, the result of accident the father of the bride, happening to hear the exand, casting his eyes over the poetry, became so much affected, that his carriage was ordered, and he returned home; that night a letter of forgiveness was forwarded to his daughter. "She is thine" has ever since been the reigning favorite in the most distingue circles, and is invariably introduced on " Bridal occasions;' add but to this, that it is a reigning favorite with the Queen of British Song (Mrs. Wood) and another cause of its universal popularity will be discovered.

She is thine, the word is spoken; Hand to hand and heart to heart, Though all other ties be broken, Time these bonds shall never part. Thou hast taken her in gladness From the altar's holy shrine: Oh! remember, in her sadness, She is thine and only thine.

In so fair a temple never Aught of ill ean hope to come, Good will strive, and striving, ever Make so pure a shrine its home; Each the other's love possessing, Say what care should cloud thybrow, She will be to thee a blessing,

And a shield to her be thou.

At a recent concert in Liverpool, Mrs. Wood sang the subjoined ballad .Its effect was remarkable from the construction put upon the words by a portion of the audience:

They kneel round the altar, the organ has ceased, The hands of the lovers are joined by the Priest, That bond, which death only can sever again, Which proves ever after life's blessing or bane, A bridal like this is a sprrowful sight,

See the pale girl is bride to the feeble old knight Again the bells ring, and the moment is come, For the young heart's worst trial, the last look of

The bride who must smile on a being she hates! constraint in their manner, which both The sensation produced by part of these lines arose from the fact that Lord William Lenox, the former husband of Mrs. Wood, was present. A Liverpool paper says: "Mrs. Wood gave the words with thrilling effect. The expression of the countenance in the concluding line could not be mistaken. It may have been acting, but it was taken as a natural emanation of feeling. the awful peril of their situation, and The encore was tremendous, and the incident altogether was one which will not easily be forgotten."

Her form and face were associated with some of his wildest reveries-his feelings of affection were united with many undefinable sensations -he felt as if she were not the wife of his brother, though he knew her to be so, and his soul sickened at the thought.

He passed the night in a feverish state of joy and horror. From the window of a lonely lower, he beheld the moon shining amid the bright blue of an Alpine sky. and diffusing a calm and beautiful light on the sylvery snow. The engle owl uttered her long and plaintive notes from the castellated summers which overhung the valley, and the feet of the wild chamois were heard rebounding from the neigh! boring cliffs. These accorded with the gentler feelings of his mind, but the strong spirit which so frequently overcame him, listened with intense delight to the dreadful roar of an immense torrent, which was precipitated among broken rocks and pines, overturned and up rooted, or to the still mighter voice of the avalanche, suddenly descending with the accumulated snows of a hundred years. In the morning he met the object of his unhappy passion. Her eyes were dim with tears, and a cloud of sorrow had darkened the light of her lovely counte-
