ACADEMY.

THIS Institution is now in successful operation, under the direction of Miss L. E. CLARKE, aided by Miss M. McDUFFER, both which ladies are eminently qualified for the stations which they fill; and from the very satis-factory manner, (both to parents and pupils,) in which they conduct the School, the Trustees feel well warranted in recommending it to public natronage.

Tuesday the 19th instant is the closing day of the present Session, when there will be a vacation till Monday the 15th of January next, at which time it is hoped that the Young Ladies for the next Session will be in attendance.

ET REV. J. S. C. ABBOTT. suppose the progress and the declination of family fortunes have been essentially the same in all parts of the world, if we except those countries in which the iaws of entail and primogeniture preserve STEADS, Cribs, Washstands, Toilets, Sinks, the eldest son from the reverses which otherwise would inevitably ensue.

A young man comes into the city from his respectable home of industry in the country. He comes with energy of character, and industrious habits, and is inured to economy. He has nothing to depend upon but his own resources of diligence and fidelity.

After a few years he commences business for himself. His only capital is a good name and business talents. These guide him to wealth. In a few years be is found one of the most opulent and influential merchants in the city. And the constry boy, who comes into Washington street, as he did, in search of a fortune, now looks up to him with reverence, as IF To the Admirers of Ornamental one of the nobles of the land.

The lather has felt that in amassing property he was promoting the welfare of his famile the would be rich, and he has fallen a snare.'

The father dies. The property is divided. The sons are in husiness, their habits are such that they cannot avoid heavy expenditures, and they cannot endure the rigor of unwearied exertion. Their father commenced at the bottom of the ladder; and gradually ascended. He came from the farm house, and rose by degrees, to opulence and luxury. The sons commenced at the top of the ladder and go down. Year after year the property dwindles away, and the children are soon fairly down in the walks of obscurity and poverty. The son of the coachman and his master simply change places. The one with wife and children on the inside seat, the other with whip and rein mounts the box. It is thus the wheel is continually revolving. And this not through the ceprices of blind fortune, but through the operation of clearly defined and natural causes.

Now here is the snare into which he falls who will be rich. He may be la-" boring all his life, for the accumlation of property, and that very property be the cause of the ruin of his family. The exposure of the daughters' happiness, may be still greater than that of the sons. sure of her wretchedness is almost full. The danger of an unhappy marriage is under all circumstances great. Even when there is no allurement to the connection, but congeniality of taste and affection, the number of ill sorted and discordant unions is fearfully great. But chances of happiness which a young lady with an independant fortune has, are very small indeed. - The very fact that she has money will be regarded as an objection, by many of the best names and hearts, while the frivolous, and the heartless, and the profligate, will crowd around her. An ingenuous young man shrinks from the ighs on the imputation of marrying for money, and he fears to take as a companion, through life's hard pilgrimage, one who has been nurtured in fashion and luxury. Thus does a man not unfrequently labor for his whole life to accumulate property which roins his sons and daughters. He neglects God, gives himself no time for preparation for another world, and when age and infirmities press heavily upon him. he finds he spent his strength for that which is not bread and his labor for that 10.00 which profiteth pot. 01121
