A Sweet Little Love Story.

Dr. Whellman reports the cutest and sweetest little love story we have had from real life. Yesterday as we was waiting at Parker, Dak., for the train a country lass came in with her fellow in the farm wagon, locked in each other's arms. The young man lived in Iowa, and was on the eve of starting home. The train was ready, and on the platform went his carpet bag. Another embrace and the train pulled out. The lover swung on, and the lassie waved him kisses. The train going down grade gained rapid speed; the boy waved his handkerchief, but his heart was in his mouth. Off went the old satchel; off followed the lover, with his heels in the air. Over and over went he, and at last lit in a mudhole, rolled like a ball against the soft clay bank, and finally got on his feet and started back to see his Dufciena. She at the same time was making for him. They met and embraced, regardless of clay or bruises. The Iowa lover was heard to remark: "Duckey, I will never leave you till you are my wife." The justice of the peace was sent for, and the twane returned to the farm as one. —Mitchell (Minn.) Republican.

It is not strange that cuttlefish should damage vegetables growing in fields by the seashore, but the surprising news reaches us that a boy has been killed by one of these hideous creatures. We hear that some few days ago a boy about 14 years of age was fishing at Tomio-kamura, Amakusa, Hizen, and a huge cuttlefish stretched two of its tentacles out of the water and grasped the boy's right arm. The boy shouted for assistance, as the fish was dragging him in, and some men who were near released the lad by cutting the tentacles. When the boy reached home his arm was cold and motionless, and, notwithstanding medical aid was called in, he died five days afterward. —Hiogo News.

Remedy for Hydrophobia.

A Saxon forester, named Gastell, now of the venerable age of 82, unwilling to take to the grave with him a secret of so much import, has made public in the Leipzig "Journal," the means which he had used for fifty years, and wherewith he affirms that he has rescued many human beings and cattle from the fearful death of hydrophobia. Take immediately warm vinegar or tepid water, wash the wound clean therewith, and then dry it; pour then upon the wound a few drops of muriatic acid, because mineral acids destroy the poison of the saliva, by which means the evil effect of the latter is neutralized.

It is not generally known that a very considerable part of the ground upon which London and Liverpool are built is owned by two British noblemen. The Marquis of Westminster owns the newer part of London, and Earl Darby owns a big slip of Liverpool. The leases are for ninety-nine years. Before fifty years expire it is said that the descendants of these two men will own a great bulk of the houses in the two cities named. A bill is before Parliament to meet this threatened evil.

There are said to be about 17,000 dentists in this country, who put $1,000,000 of metal into teeth each year, and about one ton of pure gold is used annually. The making of artificial teeth is a large industry also, about 4,000,000 being made annually. Only one American in eighty has teeth perfectly free from decay.

Mrs. Moore, wife of a Philadelphia millionaire, was specially noted at a Saratoga garden party, the other day, because she wore laces and silks which cost $30,000, and also diamonds that were valued at $75,000. This makes $105,000 for one evening outfit.
