Arrested Under the 'Blue Laws'

About twenty residents of New Haven, Conn., were arrested Sunday charged with breaking the Sabbath. The charge was brought under the old "blue laws" enacted in the early part of the last century. The officers making the arrest under the direction of Grand Juror Thompson, of the town of East Haven, to whom complaints had been made by residents of the hamlet of Foxon that the people of New Haven were continually breaking the Sabbath by driving through that place, much to the annoyance of its good people. Nearly all the prisoners were accompanied by their sweethearts, who had been arrested as participants in the crime, and there were loud complaints of ill treatment. They had been kept crowded together like so many cattle during the afternoon in a barnyard, rain falling during part of the time. In the evening they were arraigned before a justice, and all who could not get $25 security to appear for examination yesterday afternoon were locked up. No carriages were stopped by the officers making the arrest but in every instance they took their prisoners at a point on the Foxon road where nuts from a group of hickory trees had fallen thickly upon the ground. Whenever a man left his wagon to pick up the nuts he was arrested and marched off.

One night last week Mr. Rhyne the jailer at Dallas was aroused and summoned in haste to the cell of a colored prisoner who had torn up his blanket and was about to be successful in hanging himself. Some of the other inmates saw the situation and raised the alarm and had not the jailer reached the cell as soon as he did the man would have succeeded in the act. . . . Mr. J. T. Womble left on our table one day this week a curiosity in the shape of an ear of corn or rather ears of corn. There actually are seventeen ears growing from one stem.—Gastonia Gazette.

Nelling's Confession.

FOWLER, IND. Oct. 17.—Nelling's confession that he had murdered Ada Atkinson was read in open court yesterday in his presence and he confirmed it in every particular, speaking of the bloody deed with no more emotion than if he had been telling of slaughtering hogs. He said he had no malice nor motive. He was only impelled to the deed by a sudden frenzy. When the formal arrangement was made charging him with malicious and premeditated murder and he was asked to plead he said he was not guilty of the whole charge. He had no malice and there was no premeditation. There was an exciting scene when he was removed from the room to jail; the spectators rose, and were ordered to sit down by the Sheriff. They did not obey, but moved toward the prisoner muttering. He was taken out of the rear door which was immediately locked, and the deputy Sheriffs announced "No man leaves the court for five minutes." The Sheriff placed Nelling in the most secure cell in the jail, and went inside with a trusty well armed force of eight men. The mob numbered 300, and stayed about the jail all night, but seemed to have no leader. The militia from Layfayette is expected soon. The mob have built a scaffold and provided a rope. At 10:30 a gang of fifty men went to get railroad iron to batter down the doors of the jail. LATER: Nelling the murderer of a young lady named Ada Atkinson, near Fowler, Ind., was taken from the jail at that place to Layfayette; hearing that a mob was being organized to lynch the murderer.

A cable from Dublin says that the Chief of Dublin Police has been retired and Chief Detective Mallon appointed to succeed him, as a reward for his services in the arrests and prosecution of the Phoenix Park murderers.
