Shooting Affray in Tennessee.

We learn that a shooting affray occurred Monday in a saloon near the Kentucky line, in Scott county, in which Smith Roberts was shot and killed by Josh Duncan. They had been drinking together in a bar room and left the place seemingly friends. Shortly after a shot was heard and Roberts found in a dying condition. He said that he had been shot by Duncan, who made good his escape and still remains at large. —Knoxville (Tenn.) Tribune, 18th

Last Wednesday a lady of our village sent to this office a potato that presents a marked resemblance to a turtle. The color and formation of the body was nearly exact, the head was properly shaped, correctly proportioned, and was marked with two spots which appeared to be eyes. A well-formed caudal appendage of regulation length made the "tout ensemble" complete. . . . On the 1st Monday of the present month Mr. J. M. Vaughn, of Madison, resigned his position as chairman of the board of trustees for Madison township's railroad subscription, and Colonel J. M. Gallaway was appointed in his stead. At the meeting it was determined that the township's railroad subscription would be devoted to the construction of any road through that township that would first secure means of transportation. In addition, there was about $10,000 of individual stock represented at the meeting, and it was agreed that all these subscriptions should be pledged in the same direction. This will aggregate at least $20,000.—Leaksville Gazette.

TAKING THE BABY HOME—Deputy Sheriff Edwards, from Stokes county, passed through this morning having in his charge a little two month old babe. Three days ago the mother was carried to the Morganton Insane Asylum, and the babe being refused, the sheriff was compelled to take it back to Stokes. Sheriff Edwards did the best he could with his charge and drew a sympathizing crowd around him at the depot while waiting for the Salem train. —Greensboro Patriot, 19th.
