Employ the Girls.

Some days ago we suggested the idea to our merchants of employing females to take charge of their dry goods departments, and the very idea seems to have upset the equilibrium of the Kernersville News man's nervous sensibilities inasmuch that he gives vent to his disturbed feelings: "To encourage the employment of female clerks is to sanction and endorse a plan that will rob them of their greatest charms; that will steal away that which elevates them above the common herd." This language is a reflection upon the "true nobility" of the sons of the South, and a lack of confidence in the female sex, for a woman can be a woman, in every sense, as truly behind the counter as she can over the washtub—in the counting-room as in the cornfield; and we hope the day will never come when we shall believe any honest labor will rob them of a single "charm," or will "steal away that which elevates them above the common herd." By employing the girls we make the first step toward sending "the common herd" back to the plow handles and into the work-shop—their normal and legitimate spheres. We do away with this everlasting lounging and gossiping around stores, and compel men to buy what they want and go on about their business. If the News man is afraid to "do homage" at the shrine of a female clerk we are not, neither will any one else who has the best interests of the South at heart. There may be "other means to them of gaining a livelihood," but there are not many avenues open for them among us now other than cooking, washing, sewing—and we have known women to die from the irksome labor of running a sewing machine—hoeing corn, and working in tobacco factories. There are easier tasks in stores, and we say employ the girls.

The Winston Daily Pilot is printed by steam power. We think much of the Pilot. It is newsy. . . . J. F. Moore, esq., left this week for Texas. . . . Mt. Airy ahead. A load of fine watermelons were on the streets Thursday, Nov. 1st. They were grown 4 miles from town. . . . Married, in Mt. Airy, on Sunday, Oct. 28, 1883, by Wm. R. Bray, esq., Mr. J. D. Ayers to Miss M. J. Gardner—all of Carroll county, Va. . . . Mt. Airy needs a Steam Saw Mill. Who has the enterprise to put one in motion? We believe it would pay handsomely.—Mt. Airy News.

We are informed that one of the strange occurrences took place at Sandy Plains Baptist church last Sunday. Mr. W. T. Adams about 23 years old, was united in marriage to Miss Jane McAlister an old maid over 50 years old.—Gastonia Gazette.
