THE CONTRACT BROKEN.—Neville, since the days of Jacob and Laban, have we known a contract

like the one entered into by a Yadkin county father and an industrious young man. A white man by the name of James Buck owns a small farm in Yadkin, upon which he and his only daughter live. She is 22 years of age, and said to be plain-looking. The old man saw the chance of making a profitable crop of tobacco if he could get some one to aid him and his daughter in the field. Being very poor he could barely make enough to live on, and general knowledge of this fact prevented his obtaining assistance. A young man by the name of Richard Turney settled in the neighborhood about fourteen months ago, and obtained work on a neighboring plantation. He became enamored of Buck's daughter. The old man determined to turn the affection to account, and agreed if the young man would help him on the farm for one year, he would give him a double barrell shot gun and his daughter. Turney accepted the offer. His term of service expired on the 28th November, and he demanded the fulfillment of the contract on the spot. Buck gave him the shotgun and called the daughter in and asked her to agree to become Turney's wife. She refused, saying that she had given her heart to another, to whom she was to be married that night. Turney went off in a terrible rage, threatening to sue the old man for $5,000 for breach of contract, and to get an injunction restraining the girl from marrying his rival.

THE OLD FOLKS FOOLED.—A few evenings ago a certain young lady received a visit from a gentlemen friend and they were sitting together in the parlor. The old folks, who are very particular about their daughter's beaux, heard her say, "No, George, that's not too tight—just right." The old people thought that that was enough and rushed into the parlor, with a chair uplifted and murder in their eye, to find the young man standing in front of the glass buttoning up a new coat which he had bought at Long & Sackerman's. The old folks examined it and declared "it was not too tight" also. Diphtheria is raging at Low Gap, Surry county, so writes our agent, Mr. W. G. Whitaker.
