A TURN OF THE WHEEL.

By Constance D'Arcy Mackay.
Copyright, 1907, by Constance D'Arcy Mackay.

It was summer in Ballymoran—long days of blue and white and green, the blue of the sky, the white of drifting clouds and the bright green of the Irish turf. Gorse rose golden in the fields; wild roses bloomed by the hedges, fragile and exquisite, yet full of snares for the navy. Many an eager child plucked at them only to withdraw a scratched finger.

Terry O'Rourke, looking up from his potato patch, philosophically observed that "thin flowers were as sharp as they were swate, fry one o' them," and then smiled to himself, thinking of Clodagh Mulvaney. Hazel eyed she was, with red brown hair, cheeks like a wild rose and temper as keen edged as the prickliest thorn.

"Yet, faith, what matter about the thorns," said Terry, "if the rose be worth the winning!"

He was as quiet and determined as Clodagh was hasty, and if, as his neighbors declared, he was a bit slow in his lovmaking he was none the less sure. True, he had a dangerous rival in Jim Hagan, who had lately fallen heir to a legacy and who had spent the half of it on a brand new jaunting cart fit for the mayor himself. It was in this that Jim had begged Clodagh to accompany him to the Gulmullet fair, some ten miles distant.

stretched away unbrokenly to the sky line. There was not a cabin in sight.

There was a sob in Clodagh's voice. "My ankle's wrenched, and 'tis not a stop further I'll go," she wailed.

"What'll we do, then?" he demanded. "We'll sit here till some one comes," said Clodagh.

"I'll tell ye the best way out," said Terry. "I'll take Clodagh with me to the fair, and this'll send some one to help ye with your jaunting car. How will that be suiting ye?"

"Tis a fine mess," said he. "The wheel's broke, and Clodagh's hurt her ankle."

"I'll wear my best dress, with the blue ribbons," said Clodagh, "and keep my coat in the back of the cart." "I mistrust ye'll have to hold it on your lap, mamourneen," said Terry, "on account of the pig."

A QUEER PEOPLE IN AFRICA.

Major Powell-Cotton has found a strange people in Africa. They spend their whole time on the water of Lake Albert Edward. Their homes are all built on floating platforms anchored to long poles. The main floating village consists of thirty huts, while two others comprise ten and seven respectively. Some of these grass huts are built around a small square platform about twenty-five feet by ten feet. This forms the common back yard and practically the world of the children. Birds of all kinds—flamingoes, pelicans and marabou—fly around regardless of the presence of man, while groups of women, girls and children cluster on the edges of their floating homes.

Surgical grafting, still in its infancy, has extended with the development of antiseptic methods and now includes tissues of all kinds, parts of organs and even entire organs. Professor Garre cites the successful transplanting of pieces of skin as large as the palm of the hand, of the tip of a toe upon a maimed finger, of a fatty tumor to replace an amputated breast, of pieces of veins and arteries and of kidneys. Bone grafting has become of great importance. The thyroid gland of a woman was transplanted upon the spleen of her four-year-old idiot child, and the astonishing result was that nine months later the child was developing mentally and learning to walk and talk.

The Assassin Got the Ticket. A Russian journal tells the story of how the murderer of General Lunnitz, prefect of St. Petersburg, obtained admission to the semi-official party at which the deed was committed. After the crime all the guests were detained and their tickets were examined. There was one ticket the rightful holder of which was not present. It was no other than that of Premier Stolypin himself. The murder had been committed under cover of the invitation ticket of no less a personage than the prime minister. The premier had not been able to go, and his ticket fell into the hands of a member of the secret police named Nakolene. He resold it to the revolutionists for $16,000.

Wood Pulp Silk. Natural silk is soon to be entirely replaced by wood pulp, as madder and indigo have been supplanted by artificial products, in the opinion of the German Association of Chemical Industry. A new Belgian silk, that of Dr. Thiele, is among the latest advances. In this a thread of forty filaments is substituted for that of eight or nine in natural silk, and the thread is less tubular, more pliant and of better covering power than artificial silks with fewer strands. This process, like some others, is adapted for making artificial hair.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

"Squeezing" in the Chinese Army. The pay of a private soldier in General Ma's army is about seven Mexican dollars a month. That general is supposed to have entirely done away with the "squeezing" of the soldiers' pay. In order to do so it was necessary to behold "three or five" officers. There is some doubt, though, asserts a recent writer in the Metropolitan Magazine, whether or no this evil is entirely done away with. One soldier was asked if he would fight if China got into trouble with the Russians. "What, risk my life for $1.50 a month?" he replied.

Homeless Manhattan. A melancholy fact is that in New York, relatively to the size of the population, fewer people own homes than in any other city of the world. There dwell on the island of Manhattan 391,687 families, only 16,316 of whom hold title to the houses they occupy. Ninety-four out of every hundred families pay rent. One result of these circumstances, as Rene Bache points out in Pearson's, is that the population of the American metropolis shifts in a more kaleidoscopic fashion than any other known.

Wonderful Vision. Sir Robert Ball, the famous British scientist, is fond of imparting information to the young. Once he was showing a little boy how to study the heavens through a telescope. "That star," said Sir Robert, "goes around the other." Anxious to please such a great man, the youngster made this staggering reply, "Yes, I saw it." As a matter of fact, the star to which the scientist referred takes 900 years to make the circuit.
