Imprisonment For Debt.

In spite of the reform worked very largely through Charles Dickens' picture in the debtors' prison in "Pickwick Papers," it is said that imprisonment for debt is largely on the increase in England. A parliamentary return just issued shows that last year 11,986 debtors were imprisoned in England and Wales. In 1905 the number was 11,405, so that there was an increase of over 500 last year, although the number of complaints was less than in 1905. The house of commons during the recent session passed a resolution that the power of committing to most ardent initiators could hardly prison for nonpayment of debt ought to be restricted, and the house of lords upon the second reading of the lord chancellor's county

The Steam Turbine.

The steam turbine in its most effective form consists of a long series of rings of moving blades, between which are rings of fixed blades, which serve as guides to deliver the steam with the proper direction and velocity against the moving blades. The latter are mounted on a revolving drum, which is put in rapid rotation by the force of the steam. As the steam passes through the turbine it falls in pressure by a long series of The Prodigal Son lived up to its steps, each small, so that all of its name by bankrupting its locator, who energy may be utilized .- New York American.

A Woman Coal Miner.

Margaret Peterman of Peterman's coal mine, near Stoystown, Somerset county, can mine coal and outlift two men. She mined two loads of coal for Joseph Koontz and George Wagner, the condition being that they should load the coal in a mine car and run it out of the mine. The second car jumped the track, and the two men were unable to lift it back on the track. Miss Peterman made a wager with the men that she could lift the car on the track herself. She lifted the car on the track unassisted, and now Mr. Koontz and Mr. Wagner say they will back her against any girl in Somerset or Cambria county in a weight lifting match .-- Philadelphia Record.

A Mansfield Story.

A famous American singer, now resident in London, was at one time a member of the late Richard Mansfield's company. "One redhot day in New York," she says, "we had been rehearsing all the afternoon until we were nearly melted-all except Mansfield, who looked as cool as an ice cream soda. It must have been a greasy looking lot that was summoned to the greenroom at the close of the rehearsal. Mansfield, it seemed, had something to say to us. It was as follows:

"'I wish to inform you that I object to perspiration. I must request you hereafter to refrain from perspiring. I absolutely forbid it, That is all."
