A Tender Spot.

One of our exchanges tells of a man who was kicked by a mule "between the gate and the cowpen." That's too bad, for that part of a man's body is very tender.—Catawba County News.

Kodol for dyspepsia has helped thousands of people who have had stomach trouble. This is what our own salesmen tell you: Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People—1887 I had a disease of the stomach and bowels. I could not digest anything I ate and in the spring of 1902 I bought a bottle of Kodol and the benefit I received from that bottle at the gold and Georgia coast not only cured me but I feel better and stronger than I have ever felt before. I find it a fine food and a good tonic. My friends say I am a different man. Get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Sold by Hunter Drug Company.

The Home Paper.

The papers of the large cities are all right if you want them, but it is your own home paper that advertises your churches, your numerous societies, sympathizes with your afflictions and rejoices with you in your prosperity. In short it is the local paper that mentions the thousands and one items in which you are interested during the year, and do not find in papers of large cities.—Durham Sun.

Those who want to vote against prohibition try to make up some excuse for so doing. While those who want to vote for it, knowing they are on the right side, do not have to make any excuse. That is the difference in the right and wrong of a matter.—Greenville Reflector.

LOCKE CRAIG FOR GOVERNOR.

J. W. Bailey, Former Editor of the Biblical Recorder, Gives Convincing Reasons Why He Should be Nominated.

(From News and Observer, March 22.)

To the Editor:—I wish to submit through the columns of the News and Observer, some considerations with a view to the nomination of Mr. Locke Craig by the Democratic party to be Governor of North Carolina. I am for Mr. Craig, not by reason of any obligation whatever or any peculiar relation to him. I am for him because of reasons which constrain me as a citizen and a Democrat; and, therefore, I venture to think that a plain statement of them may appeal in like manner to other citizens and Democrats.

First of all, let it be understood that the present political conditions are unusual. There have been periods when the Democratic party might choose its standard-bearer indifferently from among many of its leaders with impunity. There never was a time when it could afford to choose men who were not leaders, but only because they wish the honor of being Governor. It is true that our majority in the State is large. But it is likewise true that a long period of national defeats has seriously diminished the party's prestige, even so that in the Solid South, there are tendencies which must gravely concern every Democrat who reckons with the future rather than the immediate present. It is the South's peculiar duty to maintain the party's spirit and the party's strength in these trying years, abiding the time when our whole country will sicken of the policies of the Republican party and look once more to the party which gave it the immemorial glory of those great years when the nation was forming.

If we in North Carolina would perform this duty, we must be sure to commit the party's standard to men not only worthy of the party's name, but such as will readily command on their own account the glad acclaim of all classes of the people—young men, business men, farmers and professional classes. We must select men that will add to the party's ranks; not men who create unnecessary antagonisms; men who make for unity, not division; men who in themselves represent the party's and the people's ideals, and not their own personal craving for honor or power; men whose records speak of aggressive measures for the public good rather than of private or public selfishness.

Moreover, within the State the aggressive policies of the Democratic party have produced an extraordinary degree of unrest. This was inevitable, and is not to be regretted. I do not deprecate these policies. If they have been blunders, they were blunders in the right direction; and we will not abandon our course. We will go on in our work for temperance; we will go on in our control of the public service corporations; we will go on with our war against the trusts. Nothing could be so fatal to the party as to hesitate here. But if we would go on successfully; if we would go on to victory; we must proceed by means of leaders who will act intelligently and not strike blindly; who will make the battle for the cause's sake and not for the fame of it; who will be moved by the highest motives, not by personal animus or any malice whatever—and certainly not by mere selfish ambitions of any sort.

In Mr. Craig we have such a man. He can be trusted to maintain the party's policy; and to maintain it intelligently and with noble purpose. In him we have a citizen who would come into office with no old scores to pay off, but only a high duty to perform; who could be trusted, therefore to act surely and with discretion. The current restlessness is not due to resentment of the party's policies so much as to the fear that its policies may fall into the hands of men who, because of a mistaken conception of their duty or the facts, for the sake of a certain fame, or in pursuit of personal aims, may actually cause them to become injurious, not only to the party and the State, but inimical to the very ends which these policies are designed to achieve.

Mr. Craig's peculiar merits lies in the fact that he can be trusted on this critical point. He can be trusted to advance these policies; to advance them for their own sake; to advance them intelligently; and to advance them surely. How singularly he stands out! In him we would have a standard-bearer who would command the full Democratic support. Nominating him the Democratic party would reaffirm all its best intentions, and in such a way as to strengthen the hopes of those who sincerely desire aggressive measures and to reassure all those who now threaten, because of a well-defined distrust of certain tendencies, to abandon it. In all the State there is no one so worthily represents just now the intelligent, aggressive spirit of the Democratic party or of the Democratic people—embracing all who believe that the people should rule—as Mr. Locke Craig.

I have submitted the moving consideration in my support of Mr. Craig. But I will add a minor yet very important consideration. I refer to Mr. Craig's service to the party and the Commonwealth. Of course, men who have never rendered any such service and others who have rendered such service only as candidates have some grounds for making light of a consideration of this sort. They can afford it. It is their only recourse. But the Democratic party cannot afford it; and the democratic people understand. Any party's success depends upon the recognition that it gives those who keep it alive. Parties that ignore their warriors—the nations that have done likewise—they are not known in the annals of men because men do not hold them worthy to be known.

Mr. Craig has been at the forefront of the Democratic party's battle-line in all the great campaigns of recent years. And not only in his Western counties, but throughout the Commonwealth he has not spared himself. We have no campaigner that can surpass him, either in personal ability or in actual service. It seems to me, therefore, in view of his peculiar fitness for the office of Governor, and his singular fitness for standard-bearer of the Democratic party at the present time, and in view, moreover, of his magnificent sacrifices for the party, that it would be almost pardonable not to nominate him. To say the least, it would prove a blunder of most serious proportions.

I would not forget, moreover, that in nominating Mr. Craig we will honor a section worthy to be honored—richly worthy. Our mountain country is a great region of the State—great in numbers, in extent, and in power; and yet greater in promise. It has been patient; but we cannot ignore it because of its faithfulness. Instead, it becomes us, now that we have so perfect an opportunity to recognize it by making its favorite son, our favorite son; its beloved leader, our beloved leader; its victorious standard-bearer, and so to call him to the highest honor in the gift of his party.

Very truly yours,
J. W. BAILEY.

Death Was On His Heels.

Jeane P. Morris, of Skippers, Va. had a close call in the spring of 1906. He says: "An attack of pneumonia left me so weak and with such a fearful cough that my friends declare consumption had me, and death was on my heels. Then I was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery. It helped me immediately, and after taking two and a half bottles I was a well man again. I found out that New Discovery is the best remedy for coughs and lung disease in all the world." Sold under guarantee at C. A. Thomas drug store. 50 and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

READ AND REFLECT!

A Thrilling Story Depicted and Held up That All May Read.

Having been born and raised in Warren county, and a loyal citizen of same for over 78 years I feel competent to relate a few facts in behalf of prohibition. I have no vote—but like the fore-runner of Christ—John the Baptist I have a Voice—which is dedicated to Christ and his cause. This Voice I will raise to relate some facts that came under my personal observation in the county of Warren and town of Warrenton. When I was a little girl at school in the town—the Sheriff took me on a visit to the jail, which I had a desire and great desire to see, as my grandfather's father was sheriff, the then sheriff having been my father's deputy. I had often heard the jail spoken of and its inmates discussed. I will say in passing, that later on, two of my brothers and three other near kinsmen, all of the same name held the honorable office of sheriff, all of them except one have passed away.

I was speechless with terror and kept near my cousin's side, when the big key, opened the heavy door, then I shivered and wanted to know whence came that terrible clamor, curses, screams, blows on the floor. "That is one of the condemned men." Where? "In the dungeon chained to the floor." Poor fellow, what for? "He was drunk and killed his cousin." What did he kill his cousin for? "Whiskey." Then another door was opened and I beheld a beautiful young man, robust, florid, well dressed, elegant—a bouquet of flowers and books on his table. I remember his fine brown hair and his noble white forehead. He extended his hand to me, thanked me for the visit and insisted that I should accept of his pet squirrel, which I gladly did, and the sheriff said: don't take his pet, but he said: it would give him more pleasure for me to accept it than for him to keep it. What is he locked up for? "Because he tried to release his father." Soon after his half brother made the same attempt, and he too was locked in this jail. How sorry I was to see this noble young man jailed because he was noble. Whiskey laughs at woe. To this day my heart aches for this beautiful young man.

These men, sheriff and prisoners were all of the aristocracy of Warren and related all of them to me. Whiskey is no respecter of persons. Then another door was opened and I beheld a horrible sight. A man, abject—chained to the floor, the iron bands on wrists and ankles—what is that in his trembling hands? A testament. What does it say? "Touch not, taste not, handle not." What put this poor man here? "Whiskey, he killed his wife." He was not a citizen of Warren, but brought from a distant county. The sheriff said: "How do you feel Mr. G." Poor fellow, his answer had no hope in it. The same day I saw the wife of the first condemned man, (she was not the mother of the young man) she had a little babe of a few months old in her arms. These two men were hung by the neck, in the suburbs of Warrenton, until dead, dead, dead. The work of the devil and his obedient servant, Whiskey.

Gov. R. B. Glenn.

When Robert Broadnax Glenn shall have retired as Governor of North Carolina he can do so with the feeling that he has done much for the State. He can have the consciousness of knowing that he gave of his time and influence for the moral and spiritual uplift of the people who overwhelmingly elected him to office. As he aptly says in his statement to the people declining to be a candidate for the Senate, his has been a strenuous administration. He has been confronted with more dilemmas than any Governor since Vance, but he has acted with wisdom and foresight; he has brought peace where there was turmoil; he has executed the laws of the State with vigor and courage; and he has not once quailed before what he conceived to be his duty.

Gov. Glenn is human, and he has made mistakes. These, however, are insignificant when one thinks of the problems that confronted the man, and are not to be reckoned against him. Whether or not he could have defeated Senator Overman is another matter and one that does not concern us here. The Senator's friends, though, must be relieved.

His record, we repeat, has been good. He has met the issues unflinchingly and his deeds will look good in the light of history. Governor Glenn may never realize his ambition, but oblivion will not mark him for its own.—Raleigh Evening Times.

To have perfect health we must have perfect digestion, and it is important not to permit of any delay the moment the stomach feels out of order. Take something at once that you know will promptly and unflinchingly assist digestion. There is nothing better than Kodol for dyspepsia, indigestion, sour stomach, belching of gas and nervous headaches. Kodol is a natural digestant, and will digest what you eat. Sold by Hunter Drug Co.

What Liquor Costs.

As the special adjournment on Saturday, Judge Shaw said that while on the bench he found that 75 to 80 per cent of all crime was traceable to the use of liquor and that for every dollar put in the school fund by the liquor traffic over two dollars were taken out to punish crime caused by the traffic.

This is a statement by one of the honestest and best judges in the State, who for eight years rode the circuits in North Carolina. That statement alone will cause many votes for prohibition on the twenty-sixth of May.—Raleigh News and Observer.

A Twenty year Sentence.

"I have just completed a twenty year health sentence, imposed by Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which cured me of bleeding piles just twenty years ago," writes O. S. Woolver, of Gettysville, N. Y. Bucklen's Arnica Salve heals the worst sores, boils, tumors, wounds and cuts in the shortest time. 25c. at C. A. Thomas drug store.

An Account of a Marriage.

An exchange gives the following account of a notable wedding: Miss Jane Jones and Bob Henry were married at the Jones mansion last night. The bride is the daughter of Constable Jones, who made a good officer, and will undoubtedly be re-elected next spring. He offers a fine horse for sale in another column. The groom runs a grocery store on Main street, and is a good patron of our advertising columns, and has a good line of bargains this week. All the summer he paid two cents more for butter than any other store in town. The happy couple left on the 10 o'clock train for Milwaukee to visit the bride's uncle, who is reported to have lots of money and Bright's disease. Bob certainly has an eye for business.
