How to Advertise.

Advertising is telling people what you have for sale and why they should buy. It sounds as easy as going to sleep in a feather bed on a cold night. Every merchant advertises in some form or another. He may use nothing but his voice and a few signs, but he advertises just the same. The merchant should consider advertising from the standpoint of utility. Headlines in some form or other, always: What is the best way? How can he reach the most people? That means, what medium should be used? The newspaper is a good vehicle for advertising for it is read by a great number of people. The local paper is best, for it reaches the people living near at hand. The store sign, the window, other means for conveying advertisements are useful in varying degrees. There is another thing to be considered - how to do the advertising, what to say and how to say it. Appeal to interest, be succinct, say something about the goods, make a specialty of something in advertisement or series of advertisements. - Ex.

Plows up a Bucket of Gold.

Messrs. Thompson and Allison, two young men living near Saxapahaw, were plowing one day last week and they struck something hard with the plow. Investigating, they found it to be a bucket full of gold coins. One of the coins was on exhibition at the Alamance Loan and Trust Company last week. We examined it. It was about the weight of a five-dollar gold piece, dated 1776, with the English coat-of-arms and some unintelligible letters on one side and a head and the inscription "Georgius III, Rex Die Gratia," on the other side. More than four hundred of these coins were found. This will total about $2,000, it is thought. - Lexington Dispatch.

Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup is the one that children like so well to take as it tastes nearly as good as maple sugar. It is different from the others as it does not constipate, but on the other hand it acts gently yet freely on the bowels and thereby drives the cold out of the system. It is sold by Hunter Drug Co.

SCHOOL DAYS.

Lord, let me make this rule:
To think of life as school,
To try my best,
To stand each test,
And do my work
And nothing shirk.
Should someone else outshine
This dullard head of mine,
Should I be sad?
I will be glad.
To do my best
At Thy behest.
If weary with my book,
I cast a wistful look
Where posies grow,
O let me know
That flowers within
Are best to win.
These lessons Thou dost give
To teach me how to live:
To do, to bear,
To get and share,
To work and pray
And trust alway.
What though I may not ask
To choose my daily task,
Thou hast decreed
To meet my need.
What pleases Thee
That shall please me.
-Malbie D. Babcock.

Cleaning Silk Fabrics.

"Silk of any kind or color may be cleaned in the following manner," says Woman's Home Companion for July. "For every quart of water to be used in washing a dress, pare and grate one large potato. Put the grated potatoes into the water, which must be cold and soft; let stand two days without being disturbed in any way, then very carefully pour off the clear liquid from the sediment into a large convenient vessel, into which dip the pieces of silk up and down.

"Of course, the silk must not be creased by wringing; let it hang and drip nearly dry, then lay it flat on the table, and wipe it first on one side and then on the other. If necessary to press it, do so between flannel with a moderate iron."

We desire to call attention to the advertisement of the State Normal and Industrial College which appears in this issue. Every year sees a steady growth in this great institution devoted to the higher education of the women of North Carolina. The McIver Memorial Building provision for which was made by the last General Assembly, is now in course of erection and will be ready for occupancy at the opening of the fall term.

The College last year had a total enrollment of 930 students. Ninety-two counties were represented. Nine-tenths of all the graduates of this institution have taught in the schools of North Carolina.

The College dormitories are furnished by the State and board is provided at actual cost. Two hundred appointments to the dormitories, apportioned among the several counties according to population, will be awarded to applicants about the middle of July. Students who may wish to secure one of these appointments should make application before July 15th.

Dr. Hale on American Travel.

In his monthly talk in the July Woman's Home Companion, Dr. Edward Everett Hale protests against the growing commercializing of travel in America, the making of it a business when it ought to be a pleasure. "The railroad people seem to think," he says "that if they can make the public understand how to get from New York to Santa Barbara in fifteen minutes less than it needed a year ago, the great battle of life is gained. "But whoever will try the experiment of saying, 'We will show you how to go from New York to the Pacific and back again, stopping forty times on the way, and coming back twice the man you were when you started,' will make a genuine contribution to the uplift of that hundred million people who are called Americans."

IN MEMORIAM

On Sunday, the 10th day of May, nineteen hundred and eight, at 10:25 o'clock, the death angel came and called Mr. T. E. Benson into eternity, at the age of sixty-eight years. He had been in feeble health for some time. Mr. Benson was a native of Nash county, but for the last seven years of his life he lived in this county, Warren.

It was the pleasure of the writer to know the deceased brother. He was a man that was loved by all who knew him. A man that feared God. The kind esteem in which he was held was attested by the many friends that followed his remains to the "Davis burying ground" near Creek, N. C., on Monday, May the 11th.

The deceased brother leaves a widow, six sons and two daughters. His many friends feel their loss, but believe their loss to be heaven's gain. May God's richest blessings rest upon the bereaved family in this their time of trouble, is the wish and the write.

How sweet to trust in Jesus. There is nothing so sublime. It fits us for eternity, and the end of time. A. P. MUSTIAN.

If you will make inquiry it will be a revelation to you how many succumb to kidney or bladder troubles in one form or another. If the patient is not beyond medical aid, Foley's Kidney Cure will cure. It never disappoints. Hunter Drug Co.

Read.

This life is indeed one of joy and sorrow, sunshine and shadow. On the 20th of May 1908 Pauline Burroughs Read, oldest daughter of Jas. M. and Sarah A. Burroughs and wife of Rev. H. P. Read, died at her home in Roberstonville, N. C., after about two weeks illness. Professing religion at an early age, she joined Mt. Auburn Christian Church, transferring her membership to Union Chapel M. E. Church after her marriage. There she remained a loyal member until death, and there we laid her precious body to await the Master's call. Being of a bright genial nature, possessing many charms and ennobling virtues, she won a host of friends that will lament her early death. She always manifested an ardent love for her people which rendered her a great favorite in the family.

Her personal appearance and home life were characterized by cheerfulness and neatness, which were beautifully attractive and doubtless those who visited her home will remember with me the sweet spirit of love and harmony that prevailed, and with what cheerful pleasure she ministered to friends and loved ones in that home. She entered heartily into her husband's ministerial work and was a source of inspiration, comfort and help to him. We deeply sympathize with the young husband in the sorrowful realization that this brightest earthly light has been taken from his home, and pray that the Heavenly light and love will fill his young life, trusting that he will lean for help upon the Powerful Arm which has seemingly afflicted him. Knowing that his dealings with us are always wise and best. "Thou art sad and lonely without our loved one we rejoice in hope that our loss is her eternal gain. Believing that even to-day she rejoices with her four baby angels and a host of friends around the throne in Heaven, where she will await our coming. She leaves a father, mother, four brothers and sisters, two devoted aunts, one uncle and many friends on whom we pray Gods comforting grace, and trust He will grant to each a happy reunion in Heaven.

"Blind Tom" the famous negro pianist, died Sunday at his home in Hoboken, N. J. He was born a slave near Columbus, Ga., in 1850, and in childhood became such a musical prodigy that he was taken nearly all over the world to give exhibitions. Though he made much money for others, since his retirement from the public some years ago he has lived almost entirely upon charity. - Greenville Reflector.

FIGHTING THE TRUSTS.

The Farmer Needs no Shot Guns to Fight Them.

Since the day that Adam said: "The woman whom Thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat," human nature has sought to put the fault on some one else if their lives have not proved successful. We so often hear the sentiment expressed: "The world owes me a living, and I propose to have it," but it is only semi-occasionally that one stops to enquire how the world owes us a living.

When Divine Love provided us with a brain to plan, and physical strength to execute, and gave us His Word for a guide, there was nothing lacking, but human will, to lead us to the highest success, along all financial, moral and physical lines.

There is one little passage in Holy Writ that says, "What doth the Lord require of thee, but that thou do justly, and love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God?"

When twentieth century methods lead us to ignore this law, our life barques will strike a snag as sure as the sun shines in the bending heavens above us, and no amount of sophistry will change the fact.

So often our farmers bemoan their sad fate, in being at the mercy of speculators, trusts and combines; but let us bring the subject to the bar of reason and common sense, and see if farmers who are so hampered, did not forge their own chains.

When our farmers make their own supplies, and have enough surplus to sell to some non-producer to buy their indispensable groceries, so they can keep their market crops intact, where will the speculator be? Not long ago I read of a man who was longing for the time to come when non-producers would have to get on their knees and beg for one turnip, and then not get it unless they paid a hundred times the worth of it. Now a spirit like that would damn its possessor, if he had the wealth of the Indies. There is a worm at the root of his moral growth that will sap every vestige of spiritual life if he allows such a sentiment to rest in his heart.

It is incumbent upon us to prevent others from taking undue advantage of us, but may the dear Lord preserve us from the extremely popular notions that we can only overcome evil by returning measure for measure. If farmers intend to take the lead in wealth, (nothing is wealth unless it is honestly obtained) morality and social standing, and go down in history to future generations, as the saviors of the nations it must be accomplished by having their hands clean - every whit. There is a plain, middle ground between mistreating others, and being mistreated one's self.

We need to plant our standard on the ground of eternal justice, and die by it if it need be; but if we fail to recognize the rights of others, our course will be like a boomerang that will utterly annihilate Christian character in its rebound. Are you tired of moralizing? Well, when you live in this world three score years you will understand the dire necessity there is to be forever on the lookout for breakers ahead. So many good people are led into shoddy transactions by stronger minds. I have such an eternal desire to see our farmers rise in the exalted positions that is their right, and due, and we know so well, that no excellence can endure on an unsound foundation.

The farmer is the most important man on this earth, so far as supplying human need is concerned, and when he is dominated by greed, he can do more harm to his fellow men than a dozen other Trusts combined. When he is offered a living price for his products, and fails to sell he is in the same category with the oil, steel, sugar, and other Trusts. The only difference is, his Trust is a hundred fold more far more reaching in its effects than the others, and the cause of God, as well as people, will rest upon him. A large number of our rural people are in the middle of a bad fix, but if they will come right down to facts they will find that they have been spending too much money, according to the size of their income. They have been paying two prices for goods because they bought them on credit. A farmer had better have any known calamity than to have unlimited credit. We will score a great victory when our farmers get too proud to wear borrowed clothes, live on borrowed food, and drive borrowed teams, hitched to borrowed vehicles. We don't need any shot guns to fight the Trusts but only need brains with which the average farmer is well supplied. - "RUTH FLETCHER."

Our National Illiteracy.

Defining an illiterate as one ten years of age who can neither read nor write in any language, the American Journal of Education gives some startling facts concerning the amount of illiteracy in the United States. In 1870 one person in every five in the United States was illiterate. At the present time, under the definition of an illiterate given above, the proportion is about one in ten. In France there is only one in sixteen; in England, Scotland and Holland only one in forty; in Switzerland only one in one hundred and sixty-six; in Denmark one in five hundred; in Sweden and Norway 1 in 1,250, while in Germany illiteracy practically does not exist. The figures are not flattering to our national pride, but they remind us first, that we are still a relatively young country, and, second, that the problem of meeting the educational needs of our herds, of immigrants is one which must demand an increasing amount of attention.

Of the states in the Union, Iowa has the smallest number of illiterates, her percentage being twenty-three in a thousand, while Louisiana has 385 for each one thousand of her people. From a table showing the ratio of illiteracy in each of the states the trained observer will draw many interesting conclusions. Two which are so palpable as not to escape the veriest layman are first, that the South is still laboring under the debt of the ignorance which slavery fostered, and, second, that the educational crown has departed from New England. Seventeen of the Middle Western states stand above the first New England state in the table of illiteracy. The sons whom New England has bred are settled on these more fertile plains, and her rock-ribbed farms are gradually being relinquished into the hands of the untutored immigrant. - Home Herald.

Will Cure Consumption.

A. A. Herreb, Finch, Ark., writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar is the best preparation for coughs, colds and lung trouble. I know that it has cured consumption in the first stages." You never heard of any one using Foley's Honey and Tar and not being satisfied. Hunter Drug Co.

Keep Your Face to the Future.

It is as important to learn to let go as it is to hold on. Let go what can't help you, cling to that which can. You make the future bright and happy if you will. It lies with yourself to do so: Think success, read success, believe in success and success will surely be yours. All the great men and women who have accomplished mighty deeds and benefitted the world have been firm believers in themselves. In their lexicon was not found the word "fail," because they eliminated it and kept ever in sight the shining goal of success which they reached by faith and hope, diligence and perseverance, and above all, confidence in their own powers. Emulate them and you will succeed. - Charlotte Observer.
