THE PRESIDENTIAL STATUS NOW.

How goes the battle? We are not yet prophesying as to the results, but at the conclusion of another week and the entrance upon the sixth week before the election have no hesitation in saying that if the election were to be held next Tuesday, instead of six Tuesdays hence Mr. Bryan would come off the winner. He is conducting an exceedingly effective campaign, aggressive and yet judicious. His invasion of the East has been a triumph; his reception marked by a series of ovations. He was never before so cordially welcomed in New York and the Washington Post, which is opposing him, states the case correctly when it says that the enthusiasm with which he has been received in that State "cannot be ignored, by impartial observers," that "the State was always doubtful and is doubtful now. There may be greater surprises in November," it concludes, "than the carrying of New York by Bryan and Chandler." The Republicans have become alive to the fact that the contest which they thought six weeks ago would be a holiday affair, is a matter of very serious business. Judge Taft has not measured up to public expectation, and the panic, unemployed workmen and trust affiliation have been pressed upon them with such vigor that the Republicans are plainly embarrassed. In a word, there is everything in the situation to-day to give the Democrats of the country encouragement.—Charlotte Observer.

On account of the new 8 hour law passed by congress in the interest of telegraphers, and also on account of so many new railroads being built and old lines extended, an unusual demand for operators has been created. Passing Summer.

The summer zephyrs, passing,
Are bidding us good-bye,
The red rose now is drooping—
Has come her time to die—
And waning light is bringing
A paleness to the sky,
The apple trees are sighing
As autumn winds go by.
So fades our dream of beauty,
A dream of summertime,
When gurgling of the brooklets
Would lightly trip to rhyme,
And with the voice of Nature
The summer bells would chime—
How fades our dream of beauty,
Of summer in her prime!
The birds are flying southward
To escape the chilling blast:
These migratory songsters
Tell us summer's past.
Of all her royal glories
We now have seen the last,
A canopy of sadness
O'er all the world is cast.
Farewell to thee, O Summer,
Thou canst not longer bide;
We'll miss thee in the city
And at the countryside;
Our hearts are full to sighing,
But summer sweet has died!

Soils Damaged More Than Half a Million Dollars by Erosion During the Recent Heavy Rains.

The heavy rains during the last of August not only did an enormous amount of damage to crops, bridges, railroads, and roads, but according to an estimate made by W. W. Ashe, Forester of the North Carolina Geological Survey, the upland farming lands of the middle portion of the State have been washed to an extent of more than half a million dollars, the damage being heaviest in those sections where the country was most hilly and the rainfall most concentrated. This estimate, which is based on the amount of soil which was shown to be in the water of the rivers during the floods, indicates that more than 1,500,000 tons of soil were washed from the hills of the Piedmont during that one week of rain. About one-fifth of the solid matter which causes the muddiness of the water during floods is humus, which is washed chiefly from the hillside farms. At two dollars a ton, which is probably less than the cost of replacing it, the loss to the farmers of the State only in the impoverishment of their soils exceeds $500,000. This is a loss which is much underestimated or entirely overlooked by the farmer because it is a loss which takes place so constantly. In the aggregate, however, it is so enormous that it is one of the chief, if not the chief reason for the poverty of so many of the red clay hillside farms, and it is keeping them depleted of the humus or manural portion of the soils. This is a loss to which northern soils are not nearly so subject on account of the lighter rainfalls and their more general character. The rainfall at Raleigh and at many other points in middle North Carolina was 12 inches in four days; at points in upper South Carolina 15 inches fell in two days; while more than 4 inches fell in one day at many places. Such concentrated precipitation, tropical in character, does not occur in the farming regions of the northeast. It follows that if the farmers of the South wish to preserve their hillside lands they must not only use every possible means of preventing erosion which are used at the North but additional means as well; not only deep plowing and cover crops but terracing as well; not hillside ditches, but level terraces. There should be no land lying idle without a crop of some kind on it to protect the soil. All land which is not in cultivation should be protected from washing by keeping it in timber. In North Carolina there are about 1,000,000 acres of idle farming land which should be planted in timber if for no other reason than to prevent it from washing, but the timber will make a good investment besides, as it will be growing all the time without any cultivation, and will soon be large enough for posts, barn poles, and even small saw logs. For any information about how to plant old gullied fields in young trees write the State Geologist, Chapel Hill, N. C.

A Popular Song of To-Day.

In the "Country Club," Jesse L. Words and music complete. George Spink it will be remembered, wrote "Bill Simmons," one of the most popular of light songs. Great Snow Storm.

The following interesting particulars of the great snow-storm of January, 1857, were taken down by Jas. A. Egerton, Esq., of Warrenton, Warren county, North Carolina:
For future reference, I make this note of the greatest snow-storm ever seen in this section of country, as there is already many exaggerated reports as to its depth, &c., &c.
It commenced falling on Saturday night, the 17th. January, 1857, and continued with much wind, until about daybreak on the Monday following. It is impossible to say with any certainty what the average depth was, though I would say 18 or 20 inches—some say 2 feet—it lies in many places 6 feet deep. I have seen it 8 feet deep at one place in the road—this was a break like an excavation of the railroad. All the excavations of the railroad, without regard to depth, were full or nearly so.
State of the Thermometer:— Sunday night, 4 degrees above zero; Monday morning, 9 degrees; Monday night, 13 degrees; Tuesday morning, 18 degrees; warmest time Wednesday, 34 degrees; Wednesday night, 28 degrees; Thursday morning, 8 degrees; Thursday night, 6 degrees; Friday morning, at or about sunrise, 6 degrees below zero; Friday night, 6 degrees above zero; Saturday, 12 degrees; after which it ranged from 18 degrees to 33 degrees, until Saturday, the 31st which is the time this is entered, (from notes kept). The snow is now going off with occasional rain.

AMERICA'S LANDED MAN.

Mr. George W. Vanderbilt's Vast Territory at Biltmore.
On the Blue Ridge Mountains in North Carolina, near the famous winter society colony at Asheville, George W. Vanderbilt has created one of the greatest estates in America. He has turned a mountain into a home site, torn down, blasted and dug away a vast pyramid of earth and rock, at a cost of a million dollars; then he told his engineers to go a thousand miles away and get enough limestone to build a house on this cut-off mountain—a house such as is seen in the valley of the Loire in France—a Norman castle. They brought the limestone and oak and other woods for the floors and walls and doors, where marble was not used. The home-maker and his wife went around the globe searching for tapestries, rugs and carpets to furnish it. Paintings and statuary from the famous collections of the old world were hauled up the hillside to adorn the interior. But what was round about was not forgotten. The chateaux of the Loire are famed for their landscape, gardens, with their walks, their fountains and their wealth of flowers, so a model of one of these miniature paradises was created out of a part of the mountain top overlooking a tumbling stream that has been cutting a channel in the rock slope for recording centuries. Below the garden that man made is another that nature made, through the heart of which dashes this watery ribbon, so there are two gardens where flowers and shrub vie with each other charming the eye and the sense.

Richard Olney For Bryan.
If any member of the late President Cleveland's cabinets has been lauded by Republicans, that member is Richard Olney, who was Secretary of State. Mr. Olney has written exhaustively this year to demonstrate that, not only all Democrats should vote for Mr. Bryan, but that Republicans should do the same. It will be interesting, not to say edifying, to read what Republican newspapers will say of Mr. Olney's statement.

THE WOMAN WHO LAUGHS.

For a good, every-day household angel give us the woman who laughs. Her biscuit may not always be just right, and she may occasionally burn her bread and forget to replace dislocated buttons, but for solid comfort all day and every day she is a very paragon. Home is not a battle field, nor life one long unending row. The trick of always seeing the bright side or if the matter has no bright side, of shining up—the dark one, it is a very important faculty; one of the things no woman should be without. We are not all born with the sunshine in our hearts, as the Irish prettily phrase it, but we can cultivate a cheerful sense of humor if we only try.—Ex.

Such is Biltmore House. You hear travelers speak of it as the finest country seat in America. Biltmore House and the 100,000 surrounding acres in the Vanderbilt domain constitute the greatest estate in America, and probably one of the greatest estates of modern creation.
